Another Reason for Reciprocity

ATTACKED WORKMAN IN STREET

John Sullivan was attacked in Washington street to-day by William D. Crowley of No. 241 Vine street, Cambridge. Crowley was held for a further examination in the Municipal Court on a charge of assault and battery with intent to kill.

Sullivan was attacked while working in a trench in Washington street, near Boylston. Crowley struck him over the head with a pickaxe, and in the belief that Sullivan had been mortally hurt his fellow workmen and a crowd chased the fleeing Crowley along Washington street, shouting threats to kill him. He was caught at Lagrange street by Patrolman John H. Sweeney of Station 4.

Sullivan, who has been in this country only four months, is nineteen years old and lives with his aunt at No. 75 Melrose street. He is in the Relief Hospital, suffering from an injury which was at first hastily diagnosed as a compound fracture of the skull, but later word from the hospital is that the wound is comparatively slight and that he is in no danger of death.

Sullivan with a gang of workmen for the Consolidated Gas Company was at work in the trench when Crowley, who had no said to be somewhat demented, came along. Witnesses of the affair told the police that Crowley stopped, looked at the men in the trench, seized a pickaxe and brought it down on Sullivan's head. Sullivan was bending over at the time and his thick cap broke the force of the blow.

Sullivan toppled over against the side of the trench, and his fellow-workmen, thinking him dead or fatally hurt, took after Crowley. They were joined by scores of persons on their way to work. Sweeney outdistanced them and caught Crowley who made no resistance.

To Chief Inspector Dugan at police headquarters Crowley said he had been drinking steadily since Friday. Having been advised to do so as a cure for tuberculosis, he said he did not know Sullivan and did not intend to strike him but was impelled to do so by the pick and shove the men in the trench that he could handle the implement better than they.

COURT HALTS LAWYERS IN $50,000 SUIT

Judge Bell created a sensation in the Superior Court at East Cambridge to-day when he suddenly halted the cross-examination of Mrs. Sarah Merriam, seventy-two years old, defendant in the suit for $50,000 brought against her by Mrs. Emma Frances Heath. He declared that he did not' intend that the court should be a school teacher for counsel as experienced as those appearing in the case.

The cross-examination of Mrs. Merriam was being conducted by Attorney Nason, counsel for Mrs. Heath, who charges that Mrs. Merriam stole the affections of her husband. Mrs. Merriam is very deaf. The lawyer had the experience a difficulty in making her hear. Attorney Choate, Mrs. Merriam's counsel, objected to the form of question.

At the point Judge Bell interrupted, saying:

"I shall have to halt this cross-examination if that's indeed that this court is to be conducted on a school teacher for counsel as experienced as that appearing in this case. I am not blaming anyone, but I must halt this examination."

Attorney Choate Objects.

When the examination was halted it had reached a point where Mr. Nason was making his question of Mrs. Merriam:

Q.—Why did you not have Mrs. Heath go to your house to stay with her husband? Was it because it was too late?

Mrs. Merriam had difficulty in understanding the question. She answered promptly at least ten times in a way that showed she did not grasp it. Finally she answered yes and she was asked:

Q.—Were you talking lessons from Mr. Heath in the management of the hotel, he acting as your tutor?

Q.—Did you not say that in fewer words perhaps I can answer it," said Mrs. Merriam. Attorney Choate objected, declaring that the questions were put in such a manner that the witness could not easily grasp them.

"All I have noticed about them is their loneliness," declared Mrs. Merriam, halted the examination, as above stated.

Asked for More Time.

Attorney Nason then urged that he be given more time. After some discussion he was given until 12 o'clock, although he asked to be allowed to continue until 1 o'clock. Judge Bell said:

"I think until 12 o'clock will be sufficient. We have had a very much extended session now and added one. Rather they have served to dull my perceptions as to the main issues in the case."

The trial of the case was resumed to-day before Judge Bell at East Cambridge. Mrs. Merriam was cross-examined by Attorney Nason. Mrs. Merriam testified that Mrs. Heath called on her at the time of the death of her husband and that she had written any of them.

She also denied that she had ever abused Mr. Heath in every her pocket book and check book, but admitted that she kept a check book that Mrs. Heath gave her. She replied to managers.

Q.—Were you asked by Attorney Nason which one of you was to be the boss in the household after the death of your husband?

Q.—Weren't they the ones that your husband called on Sunday?

Q.—If all Heath's investments that he made for you had been lucky ones, would you not have continued to employ him after this suit was brought? A.—No, I thought it best to make a change.

Q.—Why did you think it best to make a change if all your relations with him had been all right? A.—But I thought it best to make a change.

Q.—How often did you invite Mr. Heath to supper? A.—I never invited him without his wife, but sometimes when he came in just before meals I would ask him to stay. I did that with everybody. I was brought up to do so by my husband.

Q.—How many occasions did you take with Mr. and Mrs. Heath? A.—About a half a dozen.

Q.—Did you ever take any with Heath alone? A.—Never for pleasure. When we went it was only for business. I took him along because I could not hear well.

Q.—Did you ever take him to the theatre? A.—No.

Q.—Did you how did Heath get away if he was too long at the hotel? A.—We went on Sunday.

Q.—Were these excursions how long were you gone? A.—We would start in the middle of the afternoon and be gone until just before supper.

DEMAND PUBLIC LIST OF REPORTED CRIMES

A public hearing will be given at 10:30 to-morrow morning by the Committee on Cities on the bill to compel the police authorities to make public daily a complete list of reported crimes. The bill provides that this record shall be accessible at all times to the newspaper reporters and the public. The only exception provided is where the apprehension of a criminal may be hampered by publicity.

In every such case the commissioner alone may order such a case kept off the record.

TRY WOMAN ON DEATH CHARGE

PLYMOUTH, Feb. 3.—The first murder trial that has taken place in this old town in his years opened with prayer to-day when Mrs. Lena Cusumano and Enrico Mascioli were put on trial for the alleged killing of her husband. It is charged that the couple killed the man together because Mascioli was in love with the man's wife. They deny the charge and assert that the dead body, found tied up with telegraph wire, was one of Cusumano.

The trial caused much excitement here, no two trains special cars were carried to accommodate the witnesses. There were all of them summoned and all appeared except two, one of the missing men is George E. Keith, the Brockton shoe man.

Spectators Barred To-day.

The taxicabs packed the courtroom. Spectators were not let in to-day. The two prisoners have been in the Plymouth jail since their arrest about the middle of last October. Jail is about a hundred yards in the rear of the courthouse.

When Masciol, known by the American name of Harry Marshall, and nicknamed "Carmeo," and Mrs. Cusumano appeared in the street in the custody of three deputy sheriffs, the hands of the two prisoners were handcuffed together. Two of the officers, John H. Condon and John Turner, walked on either side of the man. Albert L. Simmons walked behind with the woman at his side.

Masciol was placed in the prisoner's cage, a small wooden affair. He wore a dress suit, a parole and a white tie and a brown soft hat. When lashed in the cage his manacles were removed. Mrs. Cusumano wore a Lenox dress and a gray coat. She was allowed to sit just outside the cage. She took off her coat. The two prisoners looked about them curiously. They did not manifest any fear.

Prayer Is Offered.

Beside Judge William Scudfield on the bench sat rue Rev. Charles P. Lombard, formerly pastor of the Unitarian church here. He offered a prayer. The work of examining the talesmen for a jury then began. There was a big array of lawyers on both sides.

The case is being prosecuted by district Attorney Albert F. Barker, assisted by Frederick G. Redman and George E. Adams. Defending the prisoners are William J. Congdon of Abington and Thomas J. Gargan of Boston.

Twenty-one Talesmen Disposed Of.

Up to the time the case adjourned at 12:45, until 2 o'clock, for dinner, twenty-one talesmen had been disposed of and not a man had been selected for the jury. There were frequent challenges by both sides, Masciol expressing his disapproval through George G. Hess, who was selected as interpreter for the prisoner. Although both of the prisoners are on trial for the crime, the woman seemed subdued to let the man do the talking after the men of the jurors. She sat with her hands folded in her lap and looked on.

One of the talesmen declared that they would not send a person to the death chair. Hiram F. Reed, seventy seven years of age, of Abington, was asked if he would act differently in the case of a man and woman accused of the crime of murder.

"Yes," he replied "I would not put a woman in the chair."

The murder of Frank Cusumano is alleged to have been committed September 4. A body, charred and mutilated, at first was found on Samoset Beach on that day, but later was identified as that of Cusumano, and his wife would not identify it as such.

At the time the body was found it was wrapped in an old quilt and bound up with telephone wire. Death was due, according to the Medical Examiner, to a blow on the skull with a blunt-edged instrument, presumably an axe.

Widow Under Suspicion.

Suspicion was directed toward Mrs. Lena Cusumano and her boarder, Enrico Masciolo. On the day that they were said to Hingham to have rented the house the police made a thorough search of the Cusumano home. It was the third search that had been made.

In one of the upstairs rooms they found clothing and sheets, brown spotted, which were sent to Professor Whitney of Harvard for the purpose of determining whether the spots were blood spots or not. In a yard at the rear of the house the police say they dug up an axe, also with dark spots on its surface. A piece of telephone wire, similar to that found about the body, was found near the house, and a freshly dug grave was discovered.

Mrs. Cusumano and Masciolo were arrested last May were indicted by the Grand Jury. The indictment against them charges them, jointly and separately, with the murder and separately with being accessories before the fact.

RECIPROCITY WINS IN HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—President Taft scored another point in his fight for reciprocity with Canada to-day, when the House of Representatives, by a vote of 195 to 121, agreed to consider the Mc-Call bill, which embodies the proposed reciprocity agreement.

After the vote was taken it was reported that Speaker Cannon had agreed to withdraw his opposition to the bill. The House took two committees of the whole, with Representative Mann of Illinois in the chair soon after it was called to order and the McCall bill was immediately called in.

To-day's action, which was carried by a majority of 74, insures the speedy passage of the bill.

Representative Hill of Connecticut, made the opening speech in favor of the bill. He declared that the reciprocity agreement with Canada did not mean free trade, and that its adoption would be of the greatest benefit to both countries.

President Taft was cheered and very much pleased with the reception accorded him and his reciprocity program through the Western States, and he seemed to think that he had sounded a popular chord in putting forward the reciprocity agreement as a measure desired by the people.

There was a renewal of the pressure upon recalcitrant members of the Senate with the home coming of the executive. The promised aid of the Democrats in the House made it certain that the agreement would receive a favorable vote in the lower House, although some lively plotting is promised before the vote is taken.

There has been a change of sentiment since President Taft left Washington. Senators who were disposed to fight the agreement have come to realize Mr. Taft's determination to call an extra session of Congress unless the agreement is voted upon favorably during the present session. Those senators see a session lasting far into the Summer looming ahead of them unless the wishes of the President are respected.

The old guard and others in the lower House have the moral support of the "stand pat" Senators in their hostile campaigning, and are determined to go down fighting because they see in the passage of the reciprocity measure the opening wedge for general tariff revision.

Should President Taft's measure fail, and should he call an extra session of Congress, the Democrats will in all probability demand tariff revision instead of keeping it a separate measure. Many Democrats, in fact, are now favoring a special session.

The McCall reciprocity bill was expected to be rushed through the House to-day.

PLOT TO SLAY TWO RULERS

ROME, Feb. 13.—An Anarchist plot which has for its aim the assassination of King Victor Emanuel of Italy and King Peter of Servia has been discovered by the Italian and American police. Two men were arrested in Trieste and are held in close confinement there while search is being made through other Anarchist dens in Italian cities for members of the gang. The police believe that the plot was hatched in London and New York. The first steps were taken in London, but the crusade resulting from the battle of Stepney so disturbed the plotters that they fled to America to complete them, according to the Italian police.

This conspiracy was to have been consummated in Rome when King Peter visits here. Lots had been drawn for the work of death, the police declare, and a Russian who is still at large had been chosen to throw the bomb which was to kill the two rulers. He was to be aided in his work by an Italian Anarchist named Daniele, who is now being sought.

RAISED $222,173.51 FOR 'SPENDING MONEY'

Boston Cigarmakers' Union raised $222,173.51 by boat assessments for "spending money" during the year 1910, as shown by the report of its finance committee to-day made public. This is apart from their international account of the union, and was raised wholly by voluntary assessment. The union spent $10,342 for advertising its lone label, sent $6,000 to the Tampa strikers, donated $400 to the Philadelphia car strikers, $250 to the striking shirt-waist makers, $150 to the Roxbury carpet weavers and $100 to the striking rubber workers of Hartford, Ct., while at the same time helping the Carney Hospital, the Floating Hospital, the Free Consumptives House and other local charitable institutions. Every cent of the $222,173.51 was spent.

PRICE OF EGGS IN CHICAGO GOES DOWN

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.—A break of 5 to 6 cents a dozen in the price of eggs during the last week has brought culmo to the lowest level touched in February in many years. Extra eggs closed at 21 cents a dozen, while seconds brought only 8 and 10 cents. Last September, following the long period of drouth suffered by the country, eggs came forward in excessive quantities and dealers placed them in cold storage in order to keep prices from declining. At that time they believed that the heavy movement to poultry farms would not be of long duration and that they would have little difficulty in closing holdings at a profit later in the year.

DEAD MAN VICTOR OVER DREDGE FIRM

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.—Defeated by a dead man, the Great Lakes Dredge and Dock Company has had a most experience in the Supreme Court. The departed one, who died over fifty years ago, was Andrea Ziengild, who came from Belgium and settled at the mouth of the Calumet river. He was buried in the centre of the tract, the possession of which no one had ever disputed with him. Since then various industries have taken parts of the tract and recently a fight was made over the only remaining portion, that where Ziengild was buried. The court finally decided they the ground was sacred and his bones will not be moved.

JURY CHOSEN IN TRUNK CASE

Vasco Salandzhan, the Lynn shoe cutter, was placed on trial to-day for his life, on the charge of murdering Minnie K. Monihan. The case was called before Judge George A. Sanderson in the Superior Criminal Court of Essex County at Salem at 10:35 a. m. Forty-eight talesmen, the twelve jurors had been selected, marking a new record for speed in the choice of a jury in the court.

Shortly before noon Judge Sanderson announced that he would follow the precedent set by Chief Justice Allen last year and would dismiss the jury each night so all now them to go to their homes. This will be the second time such action has been taken in a murder trial in Massachusetts. The court instructed the jurors not to read any newspapers and not to discuss the case with any one.

Of the 48 talesmen summoned, only forty-eight were examined to secure the twelve who will decide Salandzhan's fate. The jury is: John H. Brandon, foreman, ironmonger, of Haverhill; Edward P. Eastery, farmer, of West Newbury; Martin B. Crane, blacksmith, of Merrimacc; Arthur Grandpre, clerk, of Lawrence; Robert A. Watson, farmer, of Andover; Thomas White, dry goods, of Methuen; Michael J. McCarthy, carpenter, of Peabody; Frank E. McKenzie, machinist, of Essex.

Salandzhan, who is twenty-nine years old, and wears the shoes of Frank Jones in the indictment read to-day, was brought by compressed between Sheriff Samuel F. Jellison and Deputy Sheriff Arthur Bishop. He appeared to be entirely at ease, and stalked when he talked with his counsel. He was neatly dressed in a dark brown pinhead suit, with black shoes, brown tie, white shirt, turned down collar and white cuffs. He was smooth shaven. Representing the prosecution were District Attorney Henry Atwell of Lynn and Assistant District Attorney John J. Burke of Lowell. Appearing for the defense were Attorneys James H. Fiske of Lynn and Milton Sayers, an Armenian lawyer of Boston. Salandzhan answering in Armenian when he was questioned by his lawyers, the answers being interpreted by Sayers.

Following a conference at noon between counsel and the court it was decided to have the jury visit the scene of the crime to-day. Salandzhan's wife, being tried, at No. 148 Liberty street, Lynn. The jury left the 12:30 train for Lynn. They first visited the house at No. 15 Tremont street, Lynn, where the defendant and white man were last seen together.

The murder of Monihan was one of the most brutal the Lynn police have ever dealt with. The government alleges the crime was committed July 18, 1909, in the Emerson lodging house, in Salandzhan's room. The body was found several days later in a trunk. Salandzhan, who had disappeared, was finally traced to Bulgaria, whence he was brought to the Lynn police. The trunk furnished one of the exhibits in the case.

At first Salandzhan stated that he had since his friend accidentally while showing a pistol to his room. He claimed he had become frightened and had placed the body in the trunk before he died. It is expected this will be the line of defense his attorneys will adopt.

THEFTS DENIED BY POLICEMAN

William F. Taylor, reserve officer on the Somerville police force, took the witness stand in his own defense to-day when arraigned before Judge Wentworth in Somerville district court on one count of breaking and entering and larceny and five counts of larceny while a member of the force.

The six counts were taken up separately. The first one was that of breaking and entering the Lincoln schoolhouse in West Somerville on May 18 last, and larceny of a $35 talking machine, the property of Mrs. Louise K. Simms of Waverly, teacher of the first grade in that school.

On the witness stand Taylor declared that he found the talking machine in a pit on Clarendon Hill and that he took it home and kept it instead of carting it in to the police station because, when he had turned in other property he had found, he had not been given possession of it for a day or even though no claim had appeared for it.

Identifies the Machine.

The courtroom was crowded, the unusual spectacle of a policeman being on trial for his life attracting many people. Taylor was represented by Albert E. Taylor and Hughes as counsel. Captain Robert E. Perry headed the police end of the case.

Mrs. Simms, the Lincoln School teacher, identified the talking machine. She said that the last time she saw it was when she went with the police to Taylor's house at No. 47 Hancock street, February 4.

Miss Alberta K. Mandir, teacher at the Lincoln school, identified the talking machine as the one which had been in the school. She also said that a few days before the machine disappeared she missed from a key-ring in her desk a key to the front entrance door of the school.

Thomas C. Dane, janitor of the school, testified to his hours of locking up the building.

Chief Kendall Testifies.

Charles A. Kendall, Chief of Somerville Police, testified to finding the talking machine in Taylor's house on February 4. He related an interview he had with Taylor in his private office on February 6.

"I told Taylor," said the Chief, "that he had gotten into more trouble, and that, if he wanted to make any statement, he could do so or not. Taylor replied: 'As far as that talking machine is concerned, I know about the matter. All I care for are my wife and children.' He also said: 'Now tell you is the only one I will ever tell. I found the machine outside the building and carried it home in broad daylight. I understand that officers are not allowed to have things they find.'"

Chief Kendall also testified to finding in Taylor's possession a bunch of blue keys, one of which, he said, fits the east entrance door of the Lincoln School. Another key, the Chief said, is a skeleton key and will fit most any lock door in Somerville.

Lieutenant E. A. Carter corroborated the testimony of Chief Kendall.

Taylor on the Stand.

Taylor then took the stand. He was the only witness in his own behalf on the first count. He said in part:

"Early on the morning of May 18 I saw two young men, one of them carrying a heavy bundle, go into the pit on Clarendon Hill bridge. When they saw me they ran. I found this talking machine at the bottom of the pit and left it there till 7 o'clock when I went off duty. I carried it home and never made any effort to conceal it.

"I did not take it to the station because some property I found a year ago for which no owner appeared was not given back to me. When I asked for it Chief Kendall refused to give it to me. He said such property should be sold at public auction by the city.

"I heard that other policemen had got things that they made use of. I asked Chief Kendall would not use me the same way. So when I found the talking machine I decided to take it home without saying anything at the station. I watched the papers but found no report of a talking machine missing.

"From different officers I secured keys to several schoolhouses and had duplicates made and returned the original keys to their owners."

Under cross-examination Taylor said he did not remember hearing a report of a lost talking machine read at roll call.

PAN AMERICAN CONGRESS OPEN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13. — President Taft and Secretary of State Knox delivered the opening addresses at the first session of the annual conference of the Pan American Union here to-day. The conference was in the new building of the Pan-American Union which to-day was crowded with practically the whole diplomatic corps and many distinguished citizens from South and Central American countries.

The conference has the vigorous support of the Taft administration. The President believes that it will be better for the whole continent when more cordial trade relations are established, and he has in mind the establishment of a reciprocal trade agreement between the United States and her sister American Republics similar to the Canadian agreement now before Congress. He is anxious to have all these agreements completed by the time the Panama Canal is opened and in his address briefly touched on these matters.

Among the other speakers were Minister Calvo of Costa Rica, Minister Calderon of Bolivia, former Ambassador Casasus of Mexico, Senator Root, Representative Champ Clark and President J. A. Farrell of the United States Steel corporation.

The burglar hunters were called a second time to Hayward place on another alarm. It was then that they determined by peeking through a window that Tom had mixed up with the wires and turned in the alarms.

BRITISH PRAISE FOR TAFT PACT

By WILLIAM T. STEAD.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—The action which President Taft has taken in pressing the reciprocity agreement with Canada has made him far more the hero of the hour. The Liberals are delighted, the Unionists are in despair, but whether for blessing or for banning, all the talk is of President Taft. It remains to be seen, of course, whether the President will stick to his guns or whether he will disappoint the advocates of reciprocity as much as he has previously disappointed the advocates of a reduced tariff, but for the moment we all hope for the best and rejoice to believe that in every prospect that he will have the enerve and the resolution to put the thing through.

English opinion is sharply divided on the question of reciprocity between Canada and the United States. The Liberal party, which means the great majority of the nation, is hearty in favor of the freest possible trade arrangement between Canada and the United States. I believe that all Englishmen half with delight and satisfaction the conclusion of an arrangement which practically wipes out the frontier so far as relates to the natural productions of the two. But in proportion as this pleases the sensible Englishman, to a correspondingly degree it exasperates and enrages those Englishmen who are not sensible, the great tribe of the followers of St. Jingo, which has Mr. Chamberlain as its high priest and king.

Unionists in Snare.

To these demented apostles the ideal of statesmanship is to build up tariff walls between themselves and their neighbors, and to put as many artificial impediments as possible between the free intercourse of human beings who owe allegiance to different governments.

The Unionist party walked blindfolded into the snare and for the last two years have had one great English party bound the whole of its success at the polls on its ability to persuade the electors that imperial safety and imperial unity could best be secured by putting a ring fence around the empire.

They concentrated special attention upon Canada. Most unscrupulous efforts were made to mislead the British people in order to persuade them that the loyalty of Canada depended upon what was to all intents and purposes an imperial subsidy granted to Canadian wheat growers at the expense of the American farmers. These successive lines the issue was raised in the clearest possible manner before the English constituencies, and three times in succession overwhelm the conspirators against free trade and the fraternal union of peoples were subjected to a crushing defeat.

Tariff Loyalty Test.

The common sense of the British people recognizes that the loyalty of their Canadian fellow subjects never had been and ought not to be based on such an artificial and anti-social foundation as that of a tariff which made many more than a brand decree in England in order to artificially keep up a barrier between the two branches of the English-speaking race on the American continent.

The Liberals triumphed at the polls, but the Unionist press continued to bug the fond delusion that the battle had been lost. Battle cries long after the battle had been won. Now comes the peculiar distinction of President Taft that he has succeed in doing what the Liberals failed to do—dissipate the dense darkness which prevails in the Unionist ranks.

The conclusion of the reciprocity agreement has shown them the absolute absurdity of endeavoring for party or imperial purposes to make human beings living on different sides of the frontier unhelpful to each other. They see that the game is up.

Without Canada there can be no imperial preference. For this we owe much thanks to President Taft, and sincerely hope no party manoeuvres or intrigues on the part of interested parties will have time to spring up under the old tariff will be allowed to stand in the way of commercial arrangements between the Dominion and the United States.

SPECIAL CASH PRIZES FOR NEXT WEDNESDAY

By THE CONTEST EDITOR.

Next Wednesday, February 15, will mark the end of the first month of the AMERICAN'S $35,000 prize contest, which started January 15.

As a special inducement for each candidate to turn in a big vote on Wednesday, February 15, five cash prizes will be awarded to the five candidates who poll the highest vote BY SUBSCRIPTION on that day up to 10 p. m.

The prizes will be:

First prize—$20 in gold.
Second prize—$15 in gold.
Third prize—$5 in gold.
Fourth prize—$5 in gold.
Fifth prize—$5 in gold.

This offer applies only to votes BY SUBSCRIPTION turned in on Wednesday, February 15, up to 10 p. m. The office of the Contest Department at No. 272 Devonshire street will be open till 10 p. m. on that date.

Any votes mailed on Wednesday evening, before 10 o'clock, as shown by the postmark, will be accepted for this special February 15 offer. Every candidate should make a special effort for Wednesday.

The standing of contestants will soon be published.

This universal craving for a home is recognized in the arrangement of prizes in the great $35,000 Prize Contest of the AMERICAN.

The capital prize open to a candidate in any of the seven districts, is a home.

The poet has sung: "Be it ever so humble, there is no place like home."

True enough for the poet. But no one wishes a humble home if he can get a better one.

The capital prize in the AMERICAN'S $35,000 Contest is a $8,000 home. It is a prize of an $8,000 house and two lots at Riverton-on-the-Charles, one of the most beautiful residential suburbs of Boston.

An Ideal Location.

The trend of modern life is toward a desirable home in some good suburb where one can obtain fresh air and attractive surroundings, yet not be too far from the city.

Riverton-on-the-Charles answers these requirements perfectly. This $8,000 house and two lots, facing the Charles river and historic Charles River and with the broad Charles River boulevard sweeping by, have an ideal location.

The winner of this prize will have a snug and comfortable place in Winter and, in Summer, will be cooled by the invigorating breeze from the river.

The combination leaves nothing to be desired. It is a home for which a man might strive and save and scheme and work for years and years—and then not get it.

But, by the terms of this $35,000 Prize Contest, this home is to be won by some fortunate candidate by June 15, only four months from now.

No matter who the winner is, the capital prize will appeal to him or her. It is a prize which anyone will treasure—a home for life, a home to have and to hold.

A glance at the list of the other prizes—there are 1,000 in all—in this $35,000 contest, will show that all prizes are adapted to the popular taste.

Consider the leading prizes for the various districts. There are seven automobiles, one for each district. They are costly, up-to-date cars of best make, smooth-running, luxurious and of handsome appearance. We Americans have the automobile habit universally. The pride and pleasure of a motor car are too well known to require explanation.

Seven Motor Boat Prizes.

There are seven motor boat prizes. Motor boating is coming more and more to the front as a recreation. They have economy of operation. Builders make motor boats now that stand the wear and tear of hard use. The winner of these motor boat prizes will have many a delightful water trip during the Summer seasons to come.

Then the pianos. A piano is considered to-day an indispensable part of home furnishing. It is the most popular musical instrument of all. It is almost human in its powers of entertainment and of education.

An $8,000 house and two lots, seven automobiles, seven motor boats, seven pianos—these are only twenty-two out of the 1,000 prizes offered in this $35,000 Contest. The prizes speak for themselves.

The Contest Editor would recall your attention again to the special February Contest, with its fifty extra votes to be offered to the candidates who BY SUBSCRIPTION poll the most votes during February 15. To-day is February 13. It is a lucky day—not an unlucky one—for candidates who have made a good start in this special February Contest. Only fifteen more days remain in which to get subscriptions to increase your voting strength in this month. Remember, every vote you get toward your February standing also goes toward piling up your total in the main Contest. Bear in mind what the Contest Editor told you about getting Valentine Votes in honor of to-morrow—St. Valentine's Day.

Yesterday the Contest Editor called for photographs of candidates. Send your photograph in. Remember to have your name, district and full address plainly written on the back of your photograph. A photograph sent in and marked "Miss Jones" is no more use than a cancelled stamp.

Read Contest Rules.

Did you read the Contest rules in yesterday's Sunday AMERICAN? If not, better read them. Refresh your memory.

Notice particularly the rule about enclosing money orders or checks properly. See that they are made payable to the order of the AMERICAN.

Address all mail matter to AMERICAN Contest Editor, P. O. Box 227, Boston. Do not send checks or money orders with coupons. Send them separately.

In making out subscription orders be sure that the blanks are filled out properly. Give the full name of the subscriber, with State, City or town, street and number. Don't neglect these points. Neglect causes delay in delivery of the paper and that makes on loss coupons. You don't wish to lose those Sunday coupons, which count for ten votes apiece.

A candidate writes the Contest Editor that he doesn't like to ask friends to subscribe to the AMERICAN because it seems like begging.

Please get that notion out of your head once and for all. If there ever was a proposition free from the flavor of "charity" element this is the one. Your friend who subscribes to the Sunday AMERICAN gets for his money a paper which costs $10.00 every Sunday. It is the best Sunday paper obtainable. Your friend ought to feel obliged to you for making him a subscriber. The obligation is on him, if anywhere.

Don't slack up in your field work. Hustle for subscriptions and votes. Keep everlastingly at it. Don't be a loser. Be a winner.

COUNSEL FOR THAW PLANS RELEASE MOVE

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—It has been learned on good authority at White Plains that the reason counsel for Harry K. Thaw, who is confined in Matteawan Asylum, agreed in the dismissal to the court of appeals in behalf of his client from the order denying him a trial by a jury to determine his present sanity, is because Thaw is planning a new move to try and secure his release. It is said that this week his lawyer, Charles Morschauer of Poughkeepsie, will apply to some judge in the Ninth Judicial District for another writ of habeas corpus for the purpose of thaw's whose cause why he should not be discharged or transferred to some institution.

$27,500 DAMAGE AT LEWISTON, ME., FIRE

LEWISTON, Me., Feb. 13.—A threatening fire started in Michael Brownstein's block on Lisbon street, near Chestnut street, and was under good headway when discovered. Despite the efforts of the firemen the flames spread to Mendelson Bros. block. Brownstein conducted a large pawnbrokers' business in his block, while George E. Michaud's harness and leather goods store was located in Mendelson Bros.' block. Both blocks were badly burned. Brownstein places the loss on his buildings at $7,500 and values the stock, which was also ruined, at about $7,000. Mendelson Bros.' block was valued at about $7,000. Michaud's stock was estimated at $6,000.

NEW BRAINTREE MILKMEN COMPLAIN

Complaints of injustice and violation of law have been filed with the railroad commissioners by milk producers in and around New Braintree against the Boston & Maine railroad and D. Whiting & Sons, milk contractors of Boston. Hearings on the matter will begin Thursday. The complaining producers charge the railroad with leasing a car to the Whiting concern. They say the farmers must pay an extortionate sum for the use of this car. It is alleged the leasing is in direct violation of the Saunders bill. The producers claim they have to pay 5½ cents per can for shipping into Boston, while the Whiting company carries its own milk on the car at a cost of one cent per can.

TWICE NEAR DEATH IN AUTO ACCIDENT

John Leger of No. 116 Prospect street, Waltham, had two narrow escapes from serious injury when an automobile which he was driving at the corner of Weston and Vernon streets, Waltham, skidded and became wedged between a tree and a stone wall. By the force of the impact Leger was thrown nearly twenty feet, head first, and landed in a snow bank, which broke his fall, or he escaped with only a few bruises. Both the roks which control the spark and throttle slipped away and ran through his coat on either side of the body without inflicting so much as a scratch.

RIVAL CUTS IN ON MR. MELLEN

"Steal!"

One would not naturally expect Charles S. Mellen, president of the New Haven Railroad, to make use of such an exclamation, but when it is taken into consideration what is about to happen to him it will be readily seen that the expressive word is well selected.

Mr. Mellen has a penchant for railroads—especially in New England. He frowns upon anybody else who has a similar aspiration. So when the Southern New England Company, a branch of the Grand Trunk, sought a shorter last Summer Mr. Mellen was righteously indignant. He lost.

Now, see what happens: The plans of the proposed road have been filed with the selectmen of Sturbridge, and if they are carried out the new road will cut right through one of Mr. Mellen's beautiful meadows.

"By gum!" remarked a Sturbridge resident, to-day, when he learned the fact. "I knew it was there, though they were rubbing it into Mr. Mellen."

BOTH KAISERIN AND KAISER ILL

BERLIN, Feb. 13.—Despite the statement that the Kaiser has recovered from his attack of influenza, cancellation of his engagements continues, and it is now announced that the court ball fixed for Wednesday, as well as the Kaiser's other immediate engagements, have been countermanded.

Reports as to the exact cause and nature of the Kaiser's illness are mystifying. Although official reports state that it is influenza, there is a disposition to believe that this is untrue. It is well known that the ear is one of the Kaiser's weakest spots.

On Thursday and Friday it was semi-officially reported that the Kaiser's cold had taken the normal course and that his Majesty was free from fever. It is now stated that the Kaiser has succeeded in co-ouning three days of feverish influenza, but that the total removal of catarrhal symptoms would require some days. These extraordinary reports have caused in the development of suspicion both at home and abroad.

Reports have been current for days that the Kaiserin is sunk in the lowe of health, and more anxiety has been felt in regard to her condition than has been felt in regard to the Emperor's.

The Post Office,
The Popular Magazines
And the People

A provision has been added to the Post Office appropriation bill by the Senate Post Office committee without proper notice or public hearing. It provides for an unjust, discriminatory and confiscatory tax on the popular magazines. By attaching this provision to the Post Office appropriation bill at the eleventh hour, all opportunity for open discussion and consideration by the people, the publishers and the senate was cut off. It was an un-American, star-chamber proceeding, accomplished under presidential and political coercion.

If this bill is passed, with the provision which practically exempts from taxation magazines which are not spoken boldly on public questions, many of the popular periodicals will be put out of business altogether, and the others, without exception, will be seriously crippled.

Even if it were possible for the magazines to continue in business under these new conditions, the people would derive no benefit from the measure; for until the Post Office department is taken out of politics, and a businesslike management installed, it is improbable that any additional revenue collected will be used economically.

We urge every friend of honest politics, economical government and a free press to telegraph or write an immediate protest to their senators and representatives.

KILLS SON AND SELF IN PACT WITH HUSBAND

OXFORD, Feb. 13.—Love for their fourteen-year-old son and fear that he might have to suffer the pangs of poverty that had come to them was the impelling motive, it was learned today, that caused Lynwood B. Keene and his wife to write and sign the most remarkable death agreement ever prepared in New England. The strange document was prepared as the husband lay on what they both realized would be his deathbed.

"I agree," was the substance of one of the death-pact clauses, "that when my husband is dead that I will end the life of our son and then put an end to my own existence."

The agreement was kept by the widow to the letter. The three victims of natural death, murder and suicide will be interred in one grave on Wednesday.

The death pact itself and notes left by Mrs. Keene revealed a pathetic story of misfortune caused by illness, a gradual transition from affluence to poverty, the devotion of the wife to her dying husband and her distorted view for their son's future all of which led to the grim tragedy that has shocked the community.

Kills Son and Self.

True to the agreement which bound her to murder and suicide after her husband's death, the mother, within an hour after Keene had breathed his last, sent a bullet through the temple of the son, Gerald L., fourteen years old, as he slept and then turned the weapon on herself. She died almost instantly. The boy's death was not instantaneous, but he never awoke from his sleep in this world. He lingered for several hours in an unconscious state, but died soon after the arrival of a physician.

Mrs. Keene gave her relatives no intimation of her design to carry out to the full the grim death pact to which she and her dying husband had affixed their names. Keene died about 4 o'clock Sunday morning, and the widow, worn out by her long vigil at his bedside, finally was prevailed on by relatives to go to her room and obtain much needed sleep. She had scarcely retired when the boy came to the second floor of the house. The boy, Gerald, was asleep in his room adjoining that of the mother.

Left alone, Mrs. Keene did not sleep. Instead she drew out the death pact, read and reread it to key herself up to the task of carrying out its terms and then hastily wrote notes to members of the family. This done, all within an hour of her husband's death, she took the revolver, stole softly to her son's room and standing, dry-eyed over the lad as he slept, fired the fatal shot.

Mother Never Falters.

One clause of the death pact had been carried out to the letter. It remained for the mother, the self-bereaved mother to fulfil the remainder of it to the letter.

Her purpose never faltering, she returned to her own room, locked the door and, throwing herself on the bed, placed the weapon in her mouth and fired.

Those on the floor below did not hear either of the shots, and, ignorant of the double tragedy that had been enacted above them, went on with the duty of caring for the body of Mr. Keene and with other household tasks. Not until mother and son had failed to respond to repeated calls to breakfast was the double crime discovered.

Gerald Keene was still breathing when a relative forced the door of his room. Dr. H. B. Harris responded to the hurry call, but the lad did not recover consciousness and died within an hour after the discovery of the tragedy.

On the unrest in Mrs. Keene's room was found the explanation of her act. There was the death compact to which she had signed her name and to which her husband, too feeble to write, had affixed his mark. The notes evidenced the deliberate purpose with which the woman had gone about the fulfillment of the tragic agreement.

GAMMANS WILL STICK TO BRIDE

Nelson Gammans, the Harvard sophomore, whose marriage to the former wife of Rufus Garner, son of Mayor Gaynor of New York city, resulted in his disinheritance by his mother, is back from his honeymoon. He is to resume his college studies with the distinction of being one of the few married sophomores at Harvard.

Gammans is reported to have told his intimates in Westmorely Hall, Cambridge, that he was not deserting his wife despite the opposition of his mother. "In spite of the many obstacles placed in my way, I have made this young woman Mrs. Gammans," he said, "and I intend to stick by her, and I will also make it warm for those who have caused us annoyance. I intend to use my mother for what property I believe I am entitled to receive from her. She has cut me off for the purpose of making my married life unhappy and in the hope that I will desert my wife, but I shall show that I intend to stick to my wife and to care for her."

The Nelson Gammans are said to be guests of friends at a private home.

WOMAN FOR ONLY RICH IN OFFICE

Miss Mary Lee Ware, who supplied Councilman Ernest E. Smith of Ward 11 with more than two-thirds of his campaign fund, asserts her belief that no person should run for office and intimates that office-holders with no other income than the salaries of their positions are more likely to be tempted by possibilities of graft than the candidate with independent means.

Miss Ware is not a suffragist nor a suffragette. "Young men of limited and slender means should not seek places of political trust; only such should receive political preferment who have an independent income," she declared.

"I am not interested in woman suffrage. That does not mean that I am indifferent as to the personnel of the men who have a share in governing our city and Commonwealth. I believe it is a matter of vital concern to every women that only deserving men should be elected to office.

"Women can do much to ban political corruption by influencing the men with whom they come in contact. I do not believe that women should go out of their sphere, in order to purify politics. It would be a mistake for women to engage in politics actively. It would only eradicate political graft, or bring about better conditions. On the other hand it would menace that part of our social life which depends upon women for its proper development. Women's sphere is the home. It is the mainstay that mounds the man. So long as there are unscrupulous men in politics it is a reproach to the women who have reared those men.

"My interest in Mr. Smith proceeded from a knowledge of his personal merits and a desire to have deserving men promoted to political office."

SNOW SAVES ENGINE CREW IN COLLISION

FALL RIVER, Feb. 13.—Engineer Trenholm and Fireman Ross of the New Haven railroad escaped death by jumping into a snow bank when the paper train from Newport crashed into the rear of what is known as the Providence freight. The accident was a result of the failure of the crew of the freight train to flag the oncoming paper train. The locomotive of the latter crashed through two cars of the freight.

EDNA GOODRICH, WHO GETS DIVORCE FROM NAT GOODWIN

INSANITY PLEA IN WILL FIGHT

Alleging insanity and undue influence, four cousins and several lesser relatives to-day began their effort in the Suffolk Probate Court to break the will of Herbert L. Littlefield, who committed suicide by jumping into the Charles River last May.

Mr. Littlefield was a bachelor and lived for many years at the Copley Square Hotel. He left an estate valued at $80,000 to George E. and Allen Kimball, who are not relatives. The will is dated three months prior to Mr. Littlefield's death.

The principal contestants are Channon B. Littlefield of Manchester, N. H.; Wilbert H. Littlefield, Boston; Everett A. Littlefield, Everett, and Vivian A. Hovey, Arthur F. Hurpy, an attorney, who drew Littlefield's will, testified:

"I asked Mr. Littlefield if he didn't have some relatives and he said, 'Yes, I have some relatives on my mother's side, but I wouldn't know them and they wouldn't know me. I have known these two Kimball boys since they were children, and I want them to have everything.'

In opening the case of the contestants W. B. French, attorney, said: "We will offer evidence to show that Herbert Littlefield's maternal grandfather, Benjamin C. Sawyer, died insane. Then we will show that Benjamin C. Sawyer, Jr., a brother of Mr. Littlefield's mother, was insane.

"We will offer evidence to show that Adeline Littlefield, the mother of Herbert, committed suicide by hanging in her home in the South End."

GAS ASPHYXIATES FAMILY OF SEVEN

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 13.—Seven members of one family, the father, mother and five children, were asphyxiated by illuminating gas in their home in the Ghetto district of this city. The dead are Hyman Berkowitz, Rose, his wife, and Minnie, Michael, Israel, Rebecca and Pauline, whose ages range from eighteen to five years.

When their bodies were discovered in the gas-filled room by neighbors the father lay fully dressed on a bed.

The mother and children were undressed, as if for the night, and it is supposed that he accidentally stumbled against the tube, pulling it away from the fixtures on the wall. The other girl, Minnie, was to have been married in a few days. Her trousseau was found in the room on the second floor.

MRS. GOODWIN GETS DIVORCE

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—"Guess I'm now more a matrimonial remnant east upon Cupid's bargain counter."

There was a smile on Nat Goodwin's face and a tear in his eye as he said this to-day, when informed by an AMERICAN reporter that J. Channel Thompson, referee in the divorce suit brought by Edna Goodrich, his fourth wife, had recommended in his report that Mrs. Goodwin be granted an unconditional divorce.

The bobbin of the heavyweight matrimonial champion's emotions somewhat cast down now that he is once more in danger of being placed in the position of a man without a wife. But he was "Game" and the burden of his cry last night was "I don't care."

Warned that he was stealing the stuff of well known actors, he replied, "Nevertheless, I don't care. Let 'em divorce me, or let 'em not. I don't care. When you've married as my age, my boy, nothing carries you."

Two Correspondents.

The rumor that the referee has decided in favor of Miss Goodrich was confirmed by Herman L. Roth, Miss Goodrich's counsel.

"It is true that the referee has reported in our favor," said Mr. Roth. "He made his report after six weeks of hard legal fighting, during which we were bitterly opposed by Mr. Goodwin's counsel. After the filing of the referee's report I shall move before Justice Scott in special term part II. of the supreme Court that the recommendation for an absolute divorce be confirmed. I have no doubt that my motion will be granted.

"We worked up a most complete case against Mr. Goodwin and the referee has had to wade through over 800 pages of testimony before he could make his decision.

"In his decision the referee has upheld every contention we have made, including that of jurisdiction. Two correspondents were named by us, but not specifically that Mr. Goodwin did not come out in the testimony. The referee reports four findings in our favor."

No Alimony Request.

Mr. Roth said that Miss Goodrich made no request for alimony.

"Mr. Goodwin, before his marriage, executed for Miss Goodrich a deed of gift of one half interest in $1,000,000 worth of property—bonds and California real estate," added Mr. Roth. "On Mr. Goodwin's death all of this fortune goes to Miss Goodrich. So, you see, she is well provided for. She is now obtaining an income of approximately $30,000 a year from her half of the $1,000,000 and that is ample for her needs. We did not think it necessary, considering her handsome income from this source, to ask for additional alimony."

Immediately upon learning of the findings in Referee Thompson, Miss Goodrich and her mother went out of town to recuperate.

THEFT OF $10,000 JEWELRY BAFFLING

Deputy Superintendent Lawrence Cain, who is in charge of the district in which the $10,000 jewelry robbery at the store of Philip Hahn, No. 329 Tremont street, took place, is personally investigating the case. The police are baffled, as the burglars left nothing behind them in the line of a clew except a set of carpenter's tools. The thieves entered an arched alley leading from Pleasant street to a court in the middle of the building, and there found a side door which leads to the store-room of W. H. P. Robbins, coal dealer, who occupies half the store, and thence to the back room, where the rear of the safe containing the jewelry was.

AGED WOMAN DIES IN MILFORD FIRE

MILFORD, Feb. 13.—Despite efforts of three other members of the household, two of whom were overcome by smoke, Mrs. Catherine G. Middleton, eighty-two years old, was burned to death in a fire which destroyed her home, Mrs. Middleton was in her room on the second floor. Mrs. Elizabeth Quirk and John Cochrane made unsuccessful attempts to reach the aged woman and both were overcome by smoke. Thomas Quirk, seventeen years old, dragged them into the open air.

LUCIUS TUTTLE IS TO LEAVE HOSPITAL

Former President Lucius Tuttle of the Boston & Maine Railroad who has been in the Eliot Hospital, Audubon road, for several weeks, recuperating from amputation of his leg, ▼ now nearly recovered and will leave the hospital this wk. At the hospital is said that his recovery has been rapid and that he shows a wonderful vitality.

NEW RAILROAD MAY CROSS MELLEN'S LAND

STURBRIDGE, Feb. 13.—If the plans of the proposed tracks of the Southern New England railroad are agreed to, its roadway will run through land in this town, owned by Charles S. Mellen, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford road, who opposed the granting of a charter to the Southern New England Company last year.

RED STAR MANITOU DELAYED BY GALES

A wireless dispatch from the Red Star liner Manitou, carrying forty-five passengers, and a $1,000,000 cargo, states that she was being buffeted 100 miles off shore by a southwest gale, and her captain did not expect to make this port until late this afternoon. She was due in Boston Harbor this morning.

MANY RESCUED AT LYNN FIRE

One person was overcome by the smoke and fifteen others were forced into the street early to-day in a fire that gutted the three-story frame tenement building at No. 110 Federal street, Lynn.

Arthur Gordon, an invalid, who had discovered the fire, had to be carried down the stairs by his wife, assisted by Patrolman Arthur Flanagan. Mrs. Gordon, who had left her family on the top floor, had saved her two children, Donald, aged four, and Edward, aged two years.

Leaving the children in the snow, Mrs. Gordon fought her way back upstairs through the smoke. She found her husband choking and unable to move. He is nearly suffocated by the fumes.

Other Rescues Made.

Other rescues were made during the fire, which burned fiercely, shooting up from the basement, by James Gordon, brother-in-law of the woman who saved her little son and children. Gordon woke the family of Neil Saundergaard, who lived on the second floor. He then assisted the wife and Saundergaard children to safety.

Arthur Gordon was revived with great difficulty in the house of a neighbor. He has been a sufferer from rheumatism for years. He is suffering from a lung complaint. The smoke made him choke. He had the room filled with smoke, and immediately gave the alarm. He himself overcame while his wife was saving the two children.

Fire started in the basement from a defective flue. The damage to the building amounted to $2,000, and to the furniture of the families living on the second and third floors the damage amounted to $500.

Store on Ground Floor.

The ground floor was used as a store. In the second floor lived Mr. and Mrs. Saundergaard, their three children, Carolyn; Frances, three, and Oscar, six months, and three boarders, Frank Gordon, sixty; John McAdoo, forty-seven; and Gromsbeck, twenty-one.

In the third floor were Mr. and Mrs. Jas Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gordon and their two children, Donald and Reed; James Gordon, Jr., and his sister, Miss Florence Gordon.

If the rescues were effected before the fire department apparatus arrived. Patrolman Flanagan, who came to the rick of time to be of great help, stated that in a few minutes more the fire would have had such headway that escape for some of the tenants would have been impossible. It thought those who had escaped had got out of the building just in time, for the tenants were all driven out in their night clothing.

Neighbors furnished them with apparel.

GIRL BCK OF FARM SHOOTING

FARMINGTON Feb. 13.—Ernest H. Swain, twenty-two years old, the adopted son of John P. Swain of this town, is under arrest, charged with shooting Louis A. Phillips, the hired man on the Swain farm, this afternoon.

Swain was married, bears a good reputation. He is for six years in Colorado and there acquired the habit of carrying a revolver, doh he had continued since his return.

He has lately been keeping company with a young woman in Wilton, and it is said that the latter use of her name by Phillips caused the trouble.

LOVE LETTERS OUST PASTOR

WEBSTER, Feb. 13.—Love letters written to a young woman of his congregation and read to the members of the parish at a public meeting a week ago have resulted in the resignation of Rev. James H. Weeks, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer, Universalist, here for the past fourteen months. The minister has received pastorate in Philadelphia.

A month ago the pastor, who comes from Hinsdale, N. H., threatened to resign when he learned of stories being circulated about his love affair. He was to appear before the parish committee, of which Dr. Robert Conklin, district superintendent of Boston, is chairman.

Instead the pastor submitted writing the letters, but said they were all written in the most honorable manner.

"I know that there is much opposition to me in this town, and I could not avoid certain alterations in a young woman, all of which were honorable," said Mr. Weeks. "I was slandered from one end of this town to the other, and certain facts in the congregation and the fact that these letters got out ruined my usefulness to it. I regard as the most contemptible act of all. I know that some of the things I wrote would, perhaps, sound foolish when read, but in writing letters to a friend one does not always weigh his words.

"This story I don't want to be circulated, because it will cause trouble needlessly to the girl, and I don't care to have her name dragged in the mire, certainly not in the influence of relatives. I did not realize that the affair had reached such proportions as it ill I heard the many slanderous stories circulated about me."

SURGERY GIVES NEW FACE TO MALDEN MAN

Barring the facts that he cannot see out of one eye and cannot smell, William H. Anchor of No. 20 Cliff street, Malden, has a face almost as good as it was before a brass plug ripped through it as the result of an explosion of a gasoline furnace. Skilful surgery by Dr. George H. Pendick and his assistants at the Peabl Hospital, Chelsea, has practically restored his features. The bridge of Anchor's nose was torn out by the plug, his eyeball driven in and the lower portion of his skull splintered. The eyeball has been placed back in position and the tissues of the nose brought over the remaining bones of that member so that it is of normal appearance. Ashley's face is still scarred but time will remedy that.

SAVE THIS PRE CRIPTION

The following prescription may prove more valuable than gold in time of need. For weak, deranged kidneys, bladder or other urinary organs, mix one half ounce fluid extract buchu, one half ounce murax compound, six ounces good pure gin. Take one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bed time. Any well stocked drug store has the ingredients. It is easily mixed. This quickly restores these organs to their natural power of carrying off impurities. Backache, rheumatic pains and other well known symptoms must be treated promptly to be safe from more serious kidney trouble.

KENNEDY MAY BE ARCHBISHOP

Dispatches from Washington and Philadelphia say there is an almost unanimous agreement in highly informed Catholic circles that the next Archbishop of the See of Philadelphia will be Mgr. Thomas F. Kennedy, the present rector of the American College in Rome and titular Bishop of Adrianople. Mgr. Kennedy has just concluded a visit to this country, having come to see his parents. He returned to Europe last Friday.

Besides the name of Dr. Kennedy, there are also mentioned for the Philadelphia archdiocese, Bishop Garrigan of Altoona, Bishop Imbert, at present in the Philippines, Bishop Fitzmaurice of Erie, Bishop Conaty of Los Angeles, Mr. O'Connell, Coadjutor Bishop of San Francisco; Bishop Shanahan of Harrisburg, and Bishop O'Gorman of Sioux Falls.

But the name of Mgr. Kennedy seems to be first in the minds of all as the almost certain choice of Pope Pius X. The appointment will not be made for several months, as the Vatican moves in such matters with slowness and deliberation.

The funeral of Archbishop Ryan will be held Thursday, and it is expected to be attended by practically all the prominent clergymen in the American hierarchy who can reach Philadelphia in time for the obsequies.

DoYouEnjoyYour Meals?

One of the Most Important Questions to Consider in the Search for Happiness and Health.

The burning question to you is, "Are you getting out of life all the pleasure and the health you are entitled to?" If not, why not?

No matter whether every organ and member of your body is in a sound state of health and strength if your stomach is in any way disordered you are not going to be "yourself." You are going to be a worried, self-conscious, unhappy individual whose actions will reflect your condition inside, and people will naturally avoid you.

The world wants to smile and be cheerful and unless you are cheerful and smile, at least occasionally, you will have few friends, fewer opportunities, no success, and you will go down in defeat—defeated by dyspepsia and a bad stomach.

A good and thorough digestion has a quick, wonderful reaction upon the brain. You must have noticed in many times, for the brain and stomach are as intimately connected as a needle and its thread, one can hardly be used to advantage without the other. If your stomach is slow and lagy in digesting your food, it will produce at once a sluggish and cloudy influence upon your brain. Mark it! If your stomach is absolutely out of work, and fermentation is poisoning your vitals as a result, surely your brain is going to be sluggish and correspondingly decreased. No one need tell you that.

But why continue to suffer all the miseries and torments that a disordered stomach brings you?

If your stomach can not digest your food, what will? Where's the relief? Where's the cure?

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the relief and the cure. Why? Because, as all stomach troubles arise from indigestion and because one ingredient of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is able to thoroughly and completely digest 3,000 grains of any kind of food, doesn't it stand to reason that these little Dyspepsia Tablets are going to digest all the food and whatever food you put into your stomach? Science nowadays can digest food without having to use the stomach for it, and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the result of this scientific discovery. They digest, and digest thoroughly and well, anything and everything you eat.

So, if your stomach refuses to work or can't work, and you suffer from eructation, bloat, brain, fermentation, flatulence, sour stomach, heartburn, irritation, indigestion, or dyspepsia of whatever form, just take one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and see the difference. It doesn't cost much to prove it. Then you can eat all you want, what you want, wherever you want, if you use these tablets, and you can look the whole world in the face with a beaming eye and you will have a cheerful spirit, a pleasant face, a vigorous body and a clear mind and memory, and everything will look and taste delicious to you. That's life.

Get a package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at any drug store on earth for 50c a package.

Send us your name and address to-day and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

SNAPSHOT OF ROOSEVELT IN RUNNING TOGS

Kermit Roosevelt.

KERMIT RAN 30 IN B. A. A. MEET

Kermit Roosevelt, the son of former President Roosevelt, who accompanied his father on the big African hunt, and who is now a student at Harvard College, was one of the contestants at the big B. A. A. meet in this city on Saturday night, it became known to-day.

Much mystery surrounded the appearance of young Roosevelt at the Saturday night meeting. It was officially announced that he would not contest in the 600 yards race, in which, as a matter of fact, he was not entered. The announcement fooled all of the newspaper boys, and there was nothing published in yesterday's newspapers about the young African hunter racing.

Roosevelt, it may be announced by his own authority, ran in the mile handicap race. He got the biggest handicap possible—75 yards. He came out thirtieth. When Roosevelt was seen to-day and asked about his running Saturday night, he said:

"Yes, I did compete in the mile handicap, but I did not want anything said about it."

How Kermit Ran.

One of those who was at the meet and knew Roosevelt by sight told the story of his part of it to an AMERICAN reporter to-day.

In spite of his handicap Roosevelt gradually fell behind, until toward the end he was trailing among the tailenders of the fifty who started in the race. Then on the fifth lap he dropped out amid the cheers of hundreds of his fleetfoot friends and young ladies from the exclusive society set.

Kermit's number was 421. It was the first number he ever had, athletically speaking. It shone out big, resplendent—in bold face figuring—421.

Half a hundred runners in the handicap lined up. So did Kermit. He was promised in the line. His moustache shone goldener than ever. His hair was brushed park in the latest collegian style.

At the finish of the first of the thirteen laps Kermit was fifteenth in the line of runners. For some reason or other, he rapidly lost ground. It wasn't long before he was taking the dust of the twenty-fourth runner.

Seemed Greatly Fatigued.

On the tenth lap Kermit was among the thirties in the running. In the next lap he seemed greatly fatigued.

Twelve laps he finished. He was rounding out the thirteenth. Hoodoo thirteen smile. There a quarter of lap away were his friends—girls and boys. They were cheering him on. It was, "On, Salvator." But Salvator didn't "on." A quarter of a lap from the finish Kermit dropped out. He didn't get around to the spot in front of the stage which meant the finish of the race for him.

BLANCO SULKING, SAYS STEVENS

By OTHEMAN STEVENS.

EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 13.—Martin Casillas, the "gray eagle" of the insurrection, whom I saw yesterday at the junta's offices, was arrested to-day by United States soldiers near Ysleta. The colonel was trudging along the road, seeking to cross the river to make his way to Saragosa, where insurrecto headquarters have been established. But he made the mistake of carrying his rifle on his shoulder.

The soldiers brought him to this city and turned him over to United States Marshal Hilderbrand. Secretary of State Hernandez admits this is a severe blow, as Colonel Casillas is one of the most intelligent and therefore capable commanders the insurrectos possess.

General Navarro, as far as we can learn, is still about eighty miles south of Juarez. He has two trains of twelve coaches each, but the courier who rode 100 miles on horseback to report to Colonel Ruhago at Juarez said that Navarro fears that the railways have been mined and he is marching his forces, his trains following after the track has been thoroughly examined.

Colonel Blanco of the insurrectos continues to run his own war in his own way. He has not communicated with the junta nor the board of strategy, which has the hopeless task of directing the different independent commanders.

Blanco Going South.

Report has it that Blanco has turned south and intends to engage Navarro or capture Chihuahua alone. One ambition is as likely to be true as the other or both.

Orozco is placed at a dozen places today, but none are verified. If anything happens of note it would seem likely to come from Blanco, but even this is remote, for when the insurrectos get away from the water holes they are helpless, and after leaving a point only twenty miles south of here water is scarcer than truth about the war.

Many reports are given out by the insurrectos of cruelties by the Federals. One such story comes from Shafter, Tex., where a United States river guard named Tom Perrine is reported as having seen the Federals shoot four helpless old men. After they had been shot the coup de grace was administered by beating their heads in with an axe.

Juarez was excited this afternoon by the departure of a column of 287 mounted Federals, who rode south. The purpose of the sortie was not disclosed. The column took little or no water, so it is evident that their destination is not far distant.

The impression gained from talks with insurrecto chiefs is that no definite plan of action has been agreed upon. For three days this has been a war of temperament and Blanco continues to sulk in his tent, if he has one. A new pistol under discussion is the fact that the insurrectos have no flag. The design for one is being discussed.

Racing at Juarez Track.

The bull fight at Juarez was called off to-day, but the ancient cab horses raced at the Juarez track as profitably as ever. The Juarez "jefe" added to the war news to-day by ordering the dance and poker parlors to close at 6 o'clock.

CALEXICO, Cal., Feb. 13.—Sunday was a day of suppressed excitement, a detachment of Mexican Federal soldiers having appeared seven miles west of Mexicali. The insurrectos have deployed their entire force along the bank of New River, south and west of Mexicali, to be in readiness for the attack which seems almost certain.

At 3 o'clock the insurgents were in possession of Mexicali and turned the capitol of the Mexican customs service aboard just across the international line. Generals Leyva and Berthold had warned the Mexican officials that if they undertook to resume the collection of duties the insurgents would ruthlessly destroy the government buildings. The Mexican officials had moved all valuables and papers to the American side.

The insurgent leaders have received reports from their scouts that Celso Vega has divided his troops and has sent a detachment south of Mexicali to swing around and come into the town from the southeast, while another party is marching toward Mexicali from Picacho Pass.

MOB DOCTOR FOR GIVING LIE TO WOMAN

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Feb. 13.—There was a scene in the dining room of a leading hotel last night when Dr. Alexander Potter, a New York city water works expert, gave the lie direct to Miss Kate Barnard, State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections, and he was almost mobbed. In a discussion with Miss Barnard over a new water works system he said: "Miss Barnard, you are no lady; you are hiding behind your petticoats to fight me."

Miss Barnard named the State Commissioner of Health as her authority.

"That's a lie," Dr. Potter replied.

A doctor seized him and buried him against a pillar. A dozen others gathered and tried to get at him, but Miss Barnard and a hotel clerk interposed.

Miss Hall has light hair, bright, rosy cheeks and sparkling blue eyes. She is 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighs 140 pounds and looks to be three or four years older than her age.

THOUGHT HEALER QUITS BOSTON

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—There is bad news for Boston in the announcement by Mrs. Mary E. Chapin that she will cease her demonstrations of cures by the New Thought, of which she is the founder, to New York people only. This announcement, followed her lecture in the Berkeley Theatre during which she dwelt at length on her cure of a blind boy.

Albert Kane of Batavia, N. Y., was the reputed beneficiary of the healing waves sent out by Mrs. Chapin. He recovered his sight three days after she began to give him her New Thought treatment. The youth was about to be removed to a State institution for the blind when Mrs. Chapin saw the case. She says:

Cured In Three Days.

"He was taken to his home in Batavia on Saturday so completely cured that he wrote me a four-page letter of thanks. I never saw the boy until three days after my treatment by thinking had commenced, but am told that he was unable before to feed himself or to make his way without being led.

"The cure was effected by applying the principle of constructive living for health, fulness and abundance. I have determined to give to the most deserving ex- every ounce of this unusual and wonderful power that I possess.

Lives as Christ Did.

"I believe I am living as Christ lived. I've absolute assurance in my powers. Blessings are reverent, full of courageous cheer.

"Though I have always given my addresses in the Methodist Episcopal church of Boston, I never intended to speak publicly in New York. But from time they crowd was turned away from theatre it appears that I have to seek larger quarters.

"I will confine my work to New York. I've just effected the cure of one of Boston's most prominent, but as his family fervently prominent he might object to this of his name."

NO ELOPEMENT FOR LOMASNEY

Representative Martin M. Lomasney did not get married secretly or otherwise yesterday, despite reports to the effect that he had eloped, reports that thrilled political circles all over Boston and social circles in Ward 8. Mr. Lomasney says he didn't fill the role of blushing bridegroom and intimates that he ought to know.

"That's what I get for wearing an aviation cap and a new necktie," said the Ward 8 leader, a bit grouchily. "I'm too busy to think of getting married or even of having a best girl."

It was suggested that there were many attractive young women, not only in Ward 8 but other sections of the city, who would not object to becoming Mrs. Martin M. Lomasney.

"Nothing doing" replied the Czar. "Women are like Norman White. They ink too much."

SACRAMENTO, Feb. 13.—By means of a buttonhook two prisoners in the city jail tore a hole through a twenty-inch brick wall large enough for them to crawl through and made their escape.

COUNTESS CAN'T SUIT MAGYARS

BUDAPEST, Feb. 13.—Countess Ladislaus Szechenyi, who was Miss Gladys Vanderbilt of New York, is a philosopher. In talking with an intimate friend recently concerning some criticisms of the Countess' operations on the stock exchange she is quoted as saying:

"If you keep your money they say you are mean; if you spend it they say you are extravagant; if you employ it in industry they say you aim at monopoly; if you use it in the stock exchange they say you are an avaricious gambler. What is there to be done?

"Why, what is given away as Carnegie and Rockefeller give it the givers are repeatedly people say 'They never think harm than good. What's one to do?'

Hungarians Are Disappointed.

Though there is justice in the Countess's complaint, it must be admitted that some Hungarians have been disappointed in their "American acquisition." Society people expected the Szechenyis would keep a great house and entertain lavishly; but these society people say "They never think of entertaining or spending more than is absolutely necessary, and that only on themselves.

"The Countess has given them the subscription of a woman who operates on 'Change and instead of squandering her own millions puts Hungarian money in her pocket.

Gets Inside Tips.

The leading man on 'Change here is Sinai Krauss, whose presence or absence alone causes quotations to rise and fall. The Countess is a great friend of Krauss. Not a day passes but she consults him and gives him orders.

Together they bought an enormous block of shares in electric street railways in Budapest when they were quoted at par crowns. Now they have risen to 405 and they are selling them fast.

Everybody admires the Countess for smartness and tries to learn from her, but one cannot say she is beloved.

Mr. Walker is survived by his parents, three sisters and two brothers. He was born in Westboro thirty-three years ago and was educated in the Westboro public schools, later graduating from Yale. He was the son of Selectman Melvin H. and Mrs. Anna Mosee Walker. He was a regular attendant at the Westboro Baptist Church, with which his family have been identified for many years.

J. J. KELIHER CHOSEN WEST POINT CADET

John J. Keliher of No. 80 Rutland street, South End, son of Thomas J. Keliher and nephew of Congressman John A. Keliher of the Ninth District, has received a notice from the United States War Department of his appointment to a cadetship in the United States Military Academy at West Point and ordering him to report there on June 14. Jack Keliher is well known and very popular with all the boys of the Dwight and Boston Latin Schools, of which he is a graduate.

RESIGN IN ROW OVER FIGHT FILMS

WESTERLY, R. I., Feb. 13.—Moving pictures of the Johnson-Ketchel fight were exhibited in Westerly and as a result two members of the town's police committee, William Cully and Howard E. Buckley, have tendered their resignation. Their ground is that their efforts in protest the moral of the community have not met with the support of the town council.

MRS. BULL CUT OFF DAUGHTER

That Ole Bull Vaughn, daughter of the noted violinist whose widow died recently in Cambridge, will soon saw her mother, but regarded Mrs. Abby Shapleigh, a former nurse and friend of her father, as a foster mother is disclosed in the proposal of the daughter to contest Mrs. Bull's will. It gives her very little.

When Ole Bull died he left his estate, including his beloved group of old-fashioned dwelling houses at West Lebanon, Me., to Mrs. Shapleigh.

Promoters of mystic fads are remembered by Mrs. Bull's will, some of them to the extent of $10,000.

Mrs. Shapleigh had lived near by when the great Norwegian artist went to West Lebanon for his summer home. She was then a young woman and did more or less nursing in the neighborhood. It was in this capacity that she entered the family of Ole Bull, at the time when the daughter, Olea, was born.

Olea's mother being afflicted with a long drawn out illness at that time, the quiet, motherly and efficient young nurse remained at the Bull home and took charge. It was in this way that Mrs. Shapleigh became regarded as one of the family and, when later she was thrown upon her own resources, a permanent home there was provided for her.

Property Value Increased.

Thus the young Olea grew up to Mrs. Shapleigh's keeping and came to regard her almost as a mother, while Mrs. Shapleigh's own little daughter, Amelia, became a sister to Olea.

Mrs. Shapleigh's property has grown and enhanced in value by shrewd management, until now it is worth a large sum, and she has long been known as the good angel of the community. Her benefactions have extended far and wide, and several children have been taken into the family and in this woman, now aged, that Mrs. Bull has specified in her will should never receive any of her property.

So far from the bulk of Mrs. Bull estate going to the daughter, Olea, as has been stated, it seems that various codicils have changed this, so that she is to receive practically nothing, a small income being allowed, but even this is to be at the discretion of trustees, some of whom are large beneficiaries under the will.

Furthermore, the wonderful collection of gifts and curios left by Ole Bull have likewise, by codicils, been diverted from the daughter to relatives of the wife. Among these are numerous presents from crowned heads, of extremely great sentimental and actual value, although the latter is fabulous.

To Have Boston Lawyer.

It is understood that Sherman L. Whipple of Boston is to represent the daughter, who is now known as Mrs. Vaughn, having married some years ago to a son of one of the inner circles of Cambridge society.

There is said to be an abundance of material in the ways of Mrs. Bull for many years past on which to base a claim. She had devoted a large amount of time and energy in pursuing the subject of Eastern religions and philosophies, and while her interest was not confined to any one of the many ancient Cambridge mansion, many representatives of these philosophical fads and fancies have lived there. Some of these philosophers of India have been among the number.

Mrs. Bull's brother, Joseph Thorpe, married a daughter of the poet Longfellow, and they likewise lived in Cambridge. Mr. Thorpe is a lawyer and a noted golf player.

SOCIETY SMUGGLER LEAVES THE TOMBS

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—While a crowd of men and women struggled outside the Tombs to get a glimpse of her, Mrs. Roberta Menger-Corwin-Hill, the first woman ever sentenced to jail in America for smuggling, was today released from the prison. She was in a state of collapse and had to be carried from the place to her father's automobile. The young woman wore four veils and the curious ones were unable to get a look at her features. Mrs. Corwin-Hill was once known as "the belle of Sheepshead Bay." Her first husband was Halsey Corwin of Brooklyn. Next she married Meyer Hill of the English army. During the time that she has been in the Tombs it is said that all of her meals have been sent to her from one of the most fashionable restaurants in New York. She has also had champagne, prescribed by her physicians.

Effective Home Remedy for Tuberculosis

It is a serious matter when the lungs are affected. A trip away or to a sanatorium is not only tremendously expensive, but it involves separation from home and friends. Some are benefited, but none can safely return. Eckman's Alterative is effective—no leaving home necessary. For examples—

221 S. Atlantic Ave., Hoddonfield, N. J.

Gentlemen: In the Fall of 1905, I contracted a very severe cold which settled on my lungs. At last I began to raise blood and my physician then told me I must go to California immediately. At this time I was advised to take Eckman's Alterative. I stayed at home and in a few months I was the last week in October. I began to improve, and the first week in January, 1906, I resumed my regular occupation, having gained 25 pounds, fully restored to health. It is now five years since my cure has been effected and I cannot praise Eckman's Alterative too highly. I have recommended it with excellent results."

(Signed) W. M. TATEM.

Eckman's Alterative cures Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever; Throat and Lung Affections. For Sale by all Riker-Jaynes stores, Houghton & Dutton's Drug Dept., and other leading druggists. Ask for booklet of cured cases and write to Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for additional evidence.

'PAUL' SCORNED BY MRS. GLYN

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Elinor Glyn, author of well known books dealing with multiples of time, was about to go down in the steamship when a young man was announced who had claimed in an afternoon paper to be the original of Paul. In—but of course everybody knows about Paul. Paul of the story was everything irresistible, but this man—

"Why," said Mrs. Glyn, "He was impossible. He began to explain that he was not responsible for the published interview in which he declared he was the 'original' Paul, the 'beautiful Paul' of 'Three Weeks' and had received several presents from me. My maid showed him the door.

"I thought at the moment that some crank, of the sort your newspapers often speak of, had burst in upon us, and that he had better get him out quickly. It was not till later that I saw a copy of his interview."

Shows Mrs. Glyn's "Gifts."

His name is Paul Sonnerschein, hailing from Prague, twenty-four years old, who pronounces his name "Sonnershine." He is a traveling agent who sells hops to breweries.

"What we call a big man, is he not?" inquired Mrs. Glyn.

Sonnerschein had exhibited to a trusted young man journalist who wanted to meet "original Paul" several cushions and handkerchiefs considered emotional and he declared were Mrs. Glyn's own handiwork.

"I saw her do them," he asseverated. As if Paul who was an English gentleman, would ever do that. "Here is a beautiful shirt she gave me to wear when we were all over there," he added. Then as a climax he opened his trunk and displayed a fur skin.

"Almost it would not have been at all impossible," said she. "Shouldn't I call it something sharper than impertinence? What is it?

"It says he is a Hungarian, Prague, selling hops to beer-makers.

"Fancy that. I never knew this Mr. Sonnshine, never heard of him.

The Original of Paul.

The original of Paul is no specific person—he is a type of scores of English gentlemen, and I am continuing criminal action against this Paul Sonnerschein."

Later Mrs. Glyn received from the self identified Paul a rather illiterate letter, on the latter paper, saying in brief:

Disclaims Responsibility.

"Have called twice on telephone and suppose your maid has informed you on subject. I was talking to her. Believe me that I am getting many criminal letters of sorrow and the faithful promise to you that I am not guilty in the matter. Still I feel that with the rest not happen causelessly, and the cause is revealed by myself. But I would have known the conditions—you'd see.

"Sincerely hope that you will see me before I go abroad—as to any real connection with 'King Paul' of 'Three Weeks' (none—) and how the suspects have rallied me with the reply to publish anything before anybody if it is for my sake."

Mr. Sonnerschein called up the AMERICAN to say that "he was not primarily responsible for the story." Further explanation of the circumstances of the interview could be had from Mrs. Gly although he said he could not give

You see the AMERICAN everywhere—in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

1,500 RUSSIAN STUDENTS RIOT

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 13.—Fifteen hundred students of the University of St. Petersburg were arrested today following a riot during which they broke many window, hauled notices downstairs in the lecture rooms and intimidated the faculty.

A procession comprising practically the entire student body paraded through the university buildings and grounds, singing revolutionary songs and hooting cossacks in the distance behind.

The police were unable to cope with the students and a cordon of troops was thrown around the building.

Intense excitement prevailed as one arrested student, in between cries, was rushed through the streets in a military automobile. The disorders come from a disaffection with some recent ruling of the governors of the university.

The Grocer Telephones

Doubtless some persons would buy more if they visited a store and saw the attractive offerings.

But, discriminating purchasers buy only that which they want.

In these days of standard products the reputation back of the goods is as convincing over the telephone as it is on the label that attracts the eye.

Big grocers recognize this fact and arrange special telephone facilities to attend to this trade.

The little grocer is on an even footing with the big grocer under this new schedule of rates. The reduced rates will help him to do business at the lowest cost and our experts will advise him as to any rearrangement of his service that may be desirable if he will call "Fort Hill 7600" and ask for the "Rate Department."

WHARTON HEIRS MUST PAY TAX

The full bench of the Supreme Court handed down an opinion today holding that a trust deed not disclosed until at the death of its owner is liable to a succession tax. The ruling was in the action brought by State Treasurer Stevens against the children and heirs of the estate of Mrs. Nancy W. Wharton. They are William F. Wharton, of Groton, former assistant secretary of State, Edward R. and Nancy I. Wharton.

Mrs. Wharton was very rich. She had a town house in Boston and an extremely handsome estate at Groton.

She was given the trust deed in question for the property, then valued at $250,000, upon her marriage in 1844 to Joseph Wharton, a banker of Philadelphia. She kept possession of the real and personal estate thus given to her by her husband, and it has enhanced greatly in value. She made no disposition of it by will and the heirs did not pay a succession tax, according to attorneys for the State, believing it exempt because it is not a bequest. The Supreme Court holds otherwise and the State will collect a large sum in taxes on this property.

By SID WHIPPLE.

To-morrow morning at 10 o'clock the National League magnates will get together at the Hotel Breslin in New York, and go through the form of adopting the 1914 game schedule already decided upon.

As a matter of fact this annoying meeting is nothing more than an excuse for a hammering together a few trades and attempting to hatch everybody's pet idea. A game of swap is which everybody gets done.

President William Hepburn Russell of the Rustlers has left for New York, and will be joined in that city by Vice President L. C. Page and Manager Fred Tenney to answer morning roll call. They are hoping to put through one or two deals with Managers of the Giants.

The American League schedule meeting, like that of the older league, will be held tomorrow. This morning Manager Mack of Chicago and Manager Patsy Donovan of the Red Sox are to entrain on his way West, where he will arrive in time for the meeting. Incidentally he will corral the Whole City school of Red Sox players in order to have them ready for the trip to the coast.

Incidentally, it wouldn't be a surprising thing if the much talked of Shibe-Schulte deal might go through within the next few days. Neither Manager Mack nor Owner Shibe have given up the idea that the swap could be pulled off.

BOWLING ALLEY NEWS

A. H. Standish, president of the Hub Alleys in Attleboro, announces the bowling matches between the Crescents of Brockton and the Hubs. He says that he never received a challenge from Mr. Ferris of the Crescents to match Duke against Bert, but that he personally send a challenge to roll a team from the Hub alleys against the Crescents, according to Standish's statement of the state. In connection, Standish says that he has a team and that after the bowling challenge has been attended to, will take to Brockton to bring to defeat the main issue.

Maiden and Everett are seeing the high scores in the Suburban League, two points being the difference between them, according to the figures against Knight, while Everett stacks against Chelsea. The latter part of the month will be busy ones in the Suburban League alleys. The balance of the schedule follows: Jan. 26, Chelsea at Medford; Somerville at Everett; Maiden at Arlington; Belmont at Chelsea. To-night the Knights and Squires roll their postponed game at Chelsea.

There was great excitement at the Rink alleys in this city when the Crescents of Brockton and Dr. Standish and J. B. Brennan, Gloucester, will bring by a score of 1549 points to 1545 for Wm. Winslow gets a $25 suit of clothes for second prize. This counts up the one game of the series rolled in Boston, saving the amateur bowling and amateur games of the league. In each game, one ball to a box, no scores and no strikes. The match was very close.

Paul Doubler has severed his connection with the Boston alleys and takes employment with the Five River people. This serves him open to engage in matches in Greater Boston, according to the Suburban League. The latter part of the month he will be in the Boston alleys, and will be open for challenges, the game to be rolled at Medford, for a Rhoad side wager and the championship of New England.

There is a change in the schedule of the Hyde Park League, the Boston playing at Cunningham's instead of Dudley's, as announced. The schedule for the remainder of March: Feb. 27, at South Boston March 13, and Dales at Cambridge March 17. The balance of the schedule remains as originally made.

The struggle for second place in the Milton, Mattapan and Dorchester Bowling League, the Lyceum, Mattapan and Milton Athletics teams being tied with a percentage of .667 each, will be settled to-night, the games to be rolled on the home alleys for either of the teams means much just now.

Baker's team in the State Street Club League has accepted the challenge of the Y. M. C. A. team, and will roll a match game at the Y. M. C. A. Alleys. It is likely that the match will be decided either on February 18 or 20.

C. Bazars, Jr., of Westfield, won the $100 match game with Dr. Standish, of the team of the Ice Bowl, 3,006 against 2,976 in three strings, of which the former rolled 1,000 against 974. Standish rolled the remainder and North Adams, a week ago.

Dan Corcoran of the Mash Murray alleys put up a score of 990 for nine strings in a private match recently, his high string being 356. Averaging 110 for nine strings is a good stepping.

The N. Y., N. H. & H. team in the Mercantile League bowls like to play if its postponed game with Bullen on Tuesday night, making it a double-leader.

Read Fullerton's Stories and Get Inside Facts in Big League Fights

DON'T wait till April for the opening of the baseball season. It starts next Wednesday for Boston AMERICAN readers, when Hugh S. Fullerton, America's foremost baseball critic, will contribute the first of a series of articles telling the strength and weaknesses of the various big league teams. The leagues will be considered as a whole and the players of each team will be discussed individually by Mr. Fullerton.

The AMERICAN will give the fans a feast daily while they are waiting for the Red Sox and Rustlers to start playing, and when each team has been discussed Mr. Fullerton will sum up the situation and predict which clubs should be the pennant winners. His predictions in the past have made him famous. Watch for the new ones.

Order the AMERICAN now and be sure your baseball season opens next Wednesday instead of April 12.

HARVARD CREWS START PRACTICE

By E. V. B. PARKE.

Practice for the varsity and freshmen crews at Harvard begins for the Spring term this afternoon under the direction of Coach Jim Wray at the university boathouse.

For the time being, at least, the varsity crew squad, which has been having a little individual work for the past month, will be divided into four crews, on the basis of their showing at the candidates during the rowing practice last Fall. Work will continue in the tank daily until weather conditions permit boating on the river.

The freshmen crews will stay on the machines for a while and then go into the tank.

The varsity squad will probably be chosen from among the following men who are in the present rowing: Captain Donnelly, Manager Fuller, Coxswain Stone, Bridge, Newton, Stone, Bridge, Medford and Cambridge men, all representing the high school teams.

The schoolboys will get their first real test in the B. A. A. schoolboy games, which are to take place in Mechanics' Building, February 28, and if early performances count for anything a few interscholastic records should go by the board.

50 BOXERS SUSPENDED.

The registration committee of the N. E. A. A. U. has suspended at least fifty amateur boxers, among them William Yale, national amateur 158-pound champion; Mike Galvin, Mark Kelly, Jim Dooley and Breed. They are charged with boxing at smoke talks.

BASEBALL NEWS NOTES

St. Louis fans are modest indeed in their demands of the new manager of the Browns, if the following is to be taken seriously. This is a quote from a St. Louis paper: "Bobby Wallace gives his word that he will not be deceived, even here to make the first division. All we ask is that he finish in the first division. If he does not the key of the city will be placed in his keeping."

Earl Yingling, the young southpaw from Lebanon, is an artist. He has been performing with the Phillies this season, and some of his pen and ink paintings were highly commended by a number of the critics.

If Fred Lake can corral as many stars for the Browns as he has for the Cubs, the Browns will soon have a first division team. Lake has signed Evers, Chance, Tinker, Hofman, Pfeister, Archer, McDonald, Carrigan, Hooper, Wood and several others.

Manager Bresnahan will have a different style of pitching staff for the coming season. He has released nearly all of his veterans excepting Geller, and will have to rely mainly on raw material.

Walter Deane, the Cleveland twirler, has balked on being traded to the New Orleans club of the Southern League. Deane played in the Virginia League last year.

Harry Barton of the Reading Tri-State League team has sent word to the club officials that he will positively not play with Reading this year under the present salary limit unless he is given the same salary he received last year.

SCHOOLBOYS TO MEET ON TRACK

The schoolboy track season is now on in earnest. Most of the schools have already engaged in one or more dual meets, and those that have not yet started their season will do so in the coming week. The weather man prevented work at the out door tracks the greater part of last week, but the snow has now all been cleared away, so that the cover cloths of spike shoes will be again heard at the Irvington street oval and the Columbia avenue playgrounds this afternoon.

The meet at English High have been doing exceptionally fine work the past few weeks, and just now it looks like another championship team for the wearers of the Light and Dark Blue. English has star performers in every event. In the dash English has three men of more than ordinary ability in Haviland, Reed, and Bill Meanix. In the 200-yard run, Captain Bill Meanix and Reed are rolled again to bring home new honors to the Montgomery street school. In the 600-yard run are: Ashley Ewing, former captain of Boston Latin; Bill Ferguson, who led Mechanic Arts last season, and Sawyer. Ferguson will also be used in the 1000-yard run, in which event he is to repeat his high school boys. English is also fortunate in having quite a number of good men material for the field events.

Boston College Looks Good.

The work of the Boston College High track team has been of the best all season, it winning all of its meets with ease. The James street school has a well balanced team and should give a good run of them a hard tussle for the premier honors. A dual meet between Boston College High and English High is likely to be arranged, and if it appears to the above brought out some good men, as was proven in the meet with Coach Mallen's charges. Captain James "Buck" Donnelly, Commodore has one of the best middle distance runners in the city. In the one, Lyons and the mile runs. Donnelly is among the best milers, and should score heavily in all of the big meets. Donnelly will probably represent Boston in the first two events this season.

Captain Donnelly is being helped out in the long runs by Jack Sullivan, Leslie Edmunds and Bill Morey. All of these boys should make the spectators sit up and take notice before the indoor season closes. In the dashes Commerce has four crack men in George Soltzer, Moran, O'Brien, and Grenier. Other promising candidates are Shanahan, Shibley, Harris, Decourcey, Smith, Cosso, and Horne.

Latin High Is Strong.

At Boston Latin the chances for a winning team are very bright, and it now looks as though the Warren street schoolboys will finish second to English in the annual high school meet. Coach Mallen is plentifully supplied with good material in all of the different events.

At Dorchester, Brighton, East Boston, Dorchester and South Boston everything is getting into readiness for some scraps in the fall. The out-of-town schools are also going into the scrapping with a vengeance. Brookline, Newton, Stone, Bridge, Medford and Cambridge are all representing fairly good teams.

The schoolboys will get their first real test in the B. A. A. schoolboy games, which are to take place in Mechanics' Building, February 28, and if early performances count for anything a few interscholastic records should go by the board.

CRACK PACERS TO RACE HERE

The greatest field of free-for-all pacers that have ever been seen upon New England half mile tracks will turn for the word this season.

It has been suggested that the Dexter, Nahma, Wonsee and Hills Grove tracks offer stakes to make the meetings of the crack sidewheelers as attractive as possible. The Brockton Fair already announces a $2,500 stake.

A. S. Case, the owner of Baron Whips, 2.05¼, who will race here for the first time in New England upon a half mile track, calls attention to the high class of competing pacers. He says:

"Any four or six of them would put up a great race that would be a credit to any association and a big drawing card. A good, free-for-all class with such horses always draws a large attendance, and is the most talked of race of the meeting as they are a noted lot of horses that put up a good race and fast time. I never have seen a time when the prospect of a good free-for-all class pace filling was so good as at the present time, as there never were so many crack pacers here to be raced over half-mile tracks as there are this season. Therefore, I think if secretaries will take the matter into consideration and give a good size purse for an open pace at their meetings, which, no doubt, will be well filled, it will be a big drawing card, and put up a good race which will please the public, who should be catered to.

"Among the cracks to be seen in New England this year are Ellis Ambulator, Walter Direct, Minnie M., Bella Vera Boy, Johnson, Jennie W., Major Brino, Major Mallow, Gen. Eli, Lassen, Blind Sam, Wilkes, Merry Widow, Alwanda, Mike Will, Minnie M., Belle Vera Boy, Johnson, Jennie Cinders, Rock C., Good Goods, Miss Syracuse, Nesto Boy, Mc Star, William C., Frank P., Metropole, Earl Jr., Roberts J., Waverly, Ben Como, The Friend, Jerry H., Lassen, Dr. Jack, Red Cloud, Red Bow, Grace G., Cafeno and a lot of others.

BOSTON MEN ATTEND POLO BOARD MEETING

Joshua Crane, Jr., and Dudley P. Rogers will represent Boston as delegates to the annual meeting of the Polo Association, which will be held in New York on Wednesday. There does not at present appear to be any sentiment in favor of changing the rules of the game, although there seems to be some players who would like to see the rule changed as to the position of the ball after the period has ended.

R. L. Agassiz of this city has been elected a member of the board of governors of the Point Judith Club, and will hold a most important office by reason of the fact that the noted organization has taken in the matter of an interurban station at Huntington.

"HAYSEED" MUSIC AT FELLSWAY CLUB DANCE

A barn dance is announced by the Fellsway Driving Club at Clintonia Hall, Gilman square, Somerville, Tue-day evening, February 21. Whist will be provided for those members and guests who do not dance, and doughnuts and sweet cider furnished. The affair is announced to consist of "four hayseeds from Fiddlers' Green," the committee consists of George A. Law, chairman; M. W. Newman, H. O. Davis and A. H. D. French.

COAST ARTILLERY TO HOLD MEET SATURDAY

The Coast Artillery Corps will hold its second indoor meet in the South Armory next Saturday night and several of the stars who competed at the R. A. A. meet, are entered. The track in the Armory will be nine laps to the mile, with raised corners, and as spiked shoes will be permitted, fast time should be made in the open track events. The games will be managed by Benny Oathoes.

SCHOOL HOCKEY TEAMS BATTLE

MELROSE HIGH.	MILTON ACADEMY.

Hanson, r.	Hand
Gately, l.	Phillips
Mackintosh, point.	Wales
Dow, c.	Hand
Chisholm, r.	Wadsworth
Referee—Dan Tobin.	Time—20m. halves.

The unbeaten Melrose High seven tackles the hardest opponent left on its schedule this afternoon at Cunningham Rink, Milton, when it plays the speedy Milton Academy team. Melrose is the recognized leader of school hockey in greater Boston.

The Academy team lost but one game and that to the speedy Harvard freshman team by a 4 to 1 score. The Melrose boys are going against a team that knows the basic game to a science. The Milton team has developed rapidly and Melrose therefore faces the hardest game of its season. The teams play clean hockey and a good match is down on the card.

HARVARD MEETS YALE SEVEN NEXT SATURDAY

Harvard will play Yale hockey team at New York Saturday night. To the victor will go second place in the Intercollegiate Hockey League standing, and should Cornell by any means fail down in its match with Dartmouth a tie will exist for the championship.

Harvard will be without Captain Horsbrooker, but the combination of forwards with Huntington moved up, Great Ice and Foster to cover point, with Richard at point, worked so smoothly against Dartmouth two weeks ago that nothing is feared.

Business Success Through Publicity

No. 48

Why Salesmen Should Ask Their Firms to Advertise.

Advertising has been called a form of sales insurance; and, because it is a form of sales insurance, salesmen should advocate that their employers advertise.

For instance, if a man wants to secure a hearing from a man who shuts himself up and refuses to see the salesman, a sure way of securing an entrance is a letter of introduction to the deliberate merchant from a friend or an acquaintance of the man. It opens the door for the salesman and introduces him in such a way that he is pretty sure to get a hearing.

If a manufacturer advertises his goods in such a way that the trade not only sees the advertising but feels the effect of it in an increased demand for the goods, when the salesman approaches the merchant to get him to stock the goods, he is pretty sure to receive a much more favorable reception and more likely to sell the goods than if he had had no such introduction.

The salesman of a manufacturer of shoes found it was very easy to get one of the best dealers in New York to put in the goods simply because they had been advertised extensively before the salesman approached the merchant.

And then again, advertising will lessen a merchant's loss through clerical inefficiency—a lack of knowledge of the goods, a failure to forcefully present them to the consumer—which often seriously impairs the chances of a sale; but if the consumer has already been informed of the desirable qualities of the goods through the right kind of publicity, one-half of the selling is accomplished when the buyer goes to the store. In other words, the merchant who advertises lessens his losses through clerical inefficiency and also increases the efficiency of his clerks by enabling them to sell more goods than they otherwise would were the explanations of the desirable qualities of the goods all left to the clerk.

If a manufacturer desires a local market for his goods, newspapers will help him to get it. They will introduce his goods to local merchants in such a way that his salesmen can secure a hearing. A merchant can market his goods best locally by telling his probable customers about the goods through the columns of the local newspaper of large circulation.

The Boston American reaches more readers than any other paper in the New England field. It can help you to market your goods through more people than any other paper. It reaches daily almost 400,000 readers.

KLAUS TO CLASH WITH LEO HOUCK

Frank Klaus of Pittsburg and Leo Houck of Lancaster, Pa., meet in a twelve-round bout at the Armory A. A. to-morrow night in one of the most important middleweight elimination contests tough title year.

With the exception of Jimmy Gardner of Lowell, and Smith the Australian, the men who clash to-morrow night are the only ones in their class who have a look in for the title of the late Stanley Ketchel. Papke was in the running, but as he lost to both Smith and Thompson he has been eliminated.

Betting on the bout is at evens. Both men are well liked by the local fans. The last time Houck boxed here was against Tommy Quill, and he made a fine impression. Since then he has boxed six rounds with Klaus in Philadelphia, and as no decisions are given in that city there is a difference of opinion as to which showed the better work.

Houck is a straight puncher and a stiff hitter, is just the sort of boxer to give Klaus an unusual amount of trouble. Klaus, on the other hand, is one of the most peculiar and determined boxers in the ring. His tearing and rushing style has won him several contests against other men.

Klaus demonstrated the kind of boxer he was against Jimmy Gardner in two of the fastest matches ever decided in this city, and his great uphill contests are still fresh in the minds of those who witnessed the bouts. It should be a great battle all the way. The winner will be matched with Jimmy Gardner.

NEWTON WILL NOT PLAY OLIVER AMES

Several good basketball games will be played this week, the contest between the Newton and Brockton Y. M. C. A. at Newton on Wednesday night bringing together two of the fastest teams in this section. The Brockton team has done well all season and should prove a

It looks as if Newton High and the Oliver Ames High Schools, the only two undefeated school teams, will not get together. The Oliver Ames team meets Melrose High at Melrose on Saturday. Melrose High was defeated by the Oliver Ames Five earlier in the season, but during the last few weeks Melrose High has shown much improvement.

STARS CLASH IN SNOWPATH RACES

The races upon th local snowpath are resumed to-day under the auspices of the Metropolitan Driving Club at the Charles River Speedway with a fine line of trotting and pacing events. The sport begins at 2 o'clock.

No trotters in recent years upon the snow horsehouts have provided more entertaining races than W. J. McDonald's Demarest, 2:09¼, and Dr. C. A. Thompson's Margate, 2:08¼. The pair of crack steppers are splendidly matched upon the snow and their races have aroused much interest. It looks as if Demarest will prove one of the fastest Speedway trotters at the half mile the coming Spring, and it is well known that last year Margate stepped him a half in 59 seconds upon a circular track. He has been easily handled by Mr. McDonald in his snow races, and has given no evidences of "taking hold," which many horsemen feared would mar his effectiveness as a Speedway contender.

Margate, the little roan stepper, has shown splendid form and Wy. Thompson has unquestionably secured a very valuable pacing performer. He is a natural-gaited trotter, can go a magnificent pace, and will be one of the most noted of the stepping in the coming matinee races of the "Mets" in the Spring.

Fred Bellows again brings out his chestnut pacer Cateeon, 2:07¾, for a crack at Chief Wilkie, 2:12¾, and Edwin S., 2:08. It should prove a merry brush in every heat for the son of Colonel Kneer, 2:11¼, is a sweet-gaited pacer and should be at the runners of the king of the Speedway in their first meeting every step of the way.

Fred Sanborn's big trotter, Fred, 2:11¾, is pretty certain to look up again with Harry Wood's Susie F. and W. J. McDonald's Monroe, 2:19¾, and the trio are very evenly matched a fine race should result.

J. D. Reay will be on hand with his new pacer, Wesley Summers, trial 2:08¾, who looks to be a very valuable green pacer and has the style and finish of a show horse. This new comer will give one of the pacers of the Charles River Speedway a run for the blue ribbon, and he should develop into a splendid prospect for the strong pacing classes of the New England half-mile tracks this year.

Knapp Forshner is on hand with Whitten Wilkes, 2:14, and the old trotting warrior who was such a favorite down at the Saugus track in the good old days, can still make the money fly.

Bert Ralston's clever pacer Bell Boy and E. K. Morse's stepper Billy K., 2:11¼, are sure to renew their up-and-tuck battle of Saturday, and others who are coming out to race are W. J. Parlman's Orphan Boy, M. F. Maher's Tiny Bourbon, and Lady Pinewood, A. L. Baker's Star King, Harry Gove's R. H. C., A. J. Carlson's Earl Rose, T. J. Watt's Elmwood, Fred Lee Gardner's Torreon, E. J. Hart's Bessie C., Dr. C. D. Thompson's Edith R., M. Merkee's Wilkswood and C. Thomson's Lady Ringwell and Bellows' Helgnatte and a host of others.

MOSQUITO FLEET ENTERTAINMENTS

At a meeting held in the Mosquito Fleet Yacht Club, Strandway, South Boston, Sunday afternoon, to make further arrangements for their twenty-second annual ball, to be held in intercolonial Hall, Dudley street, April 28, it was decided to hold the following entertainments:

On Sunday, February 19, at 3 o'clock, an entertainment will be given to members and their families and friends in the club hall. On Tuesday, February 21, a dancing party will be given in the club hall for members and their ladies.

For the balance of the Winter season entertainments will be given every Sunday afternoon. Prominent speakers will address the members and their guests.

N. E. MEET IS BARRED FROM GASKILL FIELD

WORCESTER, Feb. 13.—The 1911 championship games of the New England Intercollegiate Athletic Association will not be held on Gaskill Field, Worcester Academy, the new athletic ground which is not Fall. George A. Gaskill, counsel for the academy corporation, said to-day that he had advised Dr. Daniel W. Abercrombie, principal of the academy, not to grant the use of the grounds.

Gaskill to-day said that Gaskill field, as part of the academic plant, is exempt from taxation, but if rented for any public use outside the immediate jurisdiction of the academy it would be subject to taxation.

GOOD BOUTS CARDED AT BROCKTON CLUB

At Brockton, Wednesday night, Pack Lafrenor and Young McDonough of Manchester will meet in the feature bout of twelve rounds at the opening of the Bay State Club. Two good preliminaries, in which will appear Yank Evans and Chester Wolcott and Young Xell and Kid Burns, complete the card. The feature contest should be a thriller. When the same pair met at Boston a few weeks ago they supplied the fans with a bout that was a hummer.

THE MAGNIFICENT SUCCESS OF the annual B. A. A. games is a great tribute to George V. Brown, the very able athletic director of the Uniform organization. The flower of the amateur athletes of the East were seen in action, the games passed off without a single hitch, enthusiasm was rampant, and a brilliant assembly of Boston society graced the occasion. George again proved one of the best in his chosen vocation, and deserves the sincere thanks of every lover of athletics in New England, for the occasion was one of the most enjoyable in local history.

BOSTON LEADERS AMONG THE BETting fraternity seem widely at variance as to the merits of the rivals in the bout between Frank Klaus and Leo Houck at the Armory A. A. to-morrow night, and it now looks as if the wagers would be very nearly at even, despite the Smoky City lad's stiff battle with Willie Lewis. It looks as if there might be some very tidy wagers upon the bout this week, and with the marked difference of opinion among the sports, no opportunity will be given the best among "the scientific" to back up their opinion with mazuma.

ALTHOUGH THIS IS BASEBALL week it now appears that little will be accomplished at the meetings of the National and American leagues beyond announcing the schedules of the majors. The rules committee apparently are willing to keep hands off, despite the popular clamor for more batting. If the American League magnates vote in favor of giving Ban Johnson one ninth of the profits of the various teams, it is certain he will come in for an enormous jackpot this season for above the $25,000 annual stipend he now enjoys.

FRED PLAISTED, THE VETERAN NEW England catcher, whose friends are legion here in Boston among the lovers of aquatics, should be a great help to Coach John A. Kennedy at Yale. The Elis will undoubtedly profit much by the sage advice of the Maine sculler, who has spent a lifetime in the shell. It is too bad that Charley Nickerson, the prince of Boston rowing enthusiasts is not still living to pay a fitting tribute to Fred's ability. How the intimate friend of John Teemer and the O'Connor brothers would have gloried in the trip of Fred Plaisted to Yale.

A LARGE COMPANY OF GREATER Boston dog owners and breeders have gone to New York for the Westminster Show, which is generally held to be the largest in the history of the exhibit. There are 2,108 dogs entered in 3,250 classes, a larger number than have ever been shown at even the great dog shows in the Crystal Palace, London. In the latter noted city 211 Boston terriers, 111 collies and 107 French bulldogs. It will be a very busy week for James Mortimer, the most famous of American judges of prize dogs, who is directing the exhibit, and there will be some very brisk competition.

BY ALL MEANS HAVE ANOTHER BOXing bout between Bill (Kid) Burns and Tommy Furey with another arbiter within the squared circle. No boxing bout in New England of late has stirred up so much comment, and the boys would be pretty sure to make it another furious bout. Lew Burtscher, the manager of Leo Houck, who meets Klaus here to-morrow night, tells me that it was one of the worst decisions he ever saw in all his long ringside experience.

THE REPORT THAT SAM LANGFORD has laid $1,000 of his savings with a London betting commissioner, that he puts away Bill Lang, the Antipodean, inside of ten rounds, is a pretty good evidence of how "Hi-Hi" is feeling in the enervating climate of Piccadilly, which has raised such ructions with many American boxers. The extension of the date of the bout, a single week to February 22, will also help Sam's chances of getting in still better trim to handle the visitor from the bushwhacking country.

THE ASHMONT A. A., ONE OF THE youngest of the many athletic organizations in the Dorchester district, is holding its first annual in Lithgow Hall this evening, and President "Jack" Martin says the affair will be one of the best ever. Thanks for kind invite.

TUFTS AND TECH FIVES CLASH FEB. 28

Tufts and Technology basketball teams meet Friday in the Tech gymnasium, and a return game will be played at Medford, February 28, which will wind up the Tufts schedule. Hart, a back on the Tufts five, was unable to play in the Union game last week because of an injured knee, but it is expected he will be in shape for the Tech contest this week.

HARRY LEWIS PUTS PRIVATE HARRIS AWAY

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Harry Lewis, the American welterweight pugilist, to-day defeated Private Harris of the Coldstream Guards in the fifth round of their fight at the Empire Club, Holborn.

HYDE PARK A. C. BOUTS TONIGHT

Kid Scaler of Spokane, who made good with Boston fans when he took Pal Moore's place at a moment's notice and put up a hard battle with George Alger of Cambridge, makes his second Boston appearance to-night, tackling Billy Nixon in the feature bout at the Hyde Park A. C. It is a bout that is a corking wind-up for a very attractive program.

Scaler and Nixon met in a ten-round bout at 124 pounds ringside. Both are fast boys, and should put up a whirlwind scrap. As the remodeled clubhouse of the Hyde Park A. A. is but a short riding distance from the city proper, and as the card is an unusually attractive one, a big crowd will see to-night's show.

The boxer from the Coast has been working hard for to-night's match, as he wants to show the local enthusiasts that he is some boxer when given reasonable notice for a bout. Nixon is also in the best of shape.

Mark Kelly of Cambridge, the amateur champion, will make his first try at the professional game in an eight-round bout with Jimmy Quinlan of Danvers. Benny Burke of the South End and Johnny Thomas of the South End and Jim Carlstrom of Somerville will also appear in bouts of eight rounds each, and that great things are expected of him the coming season in a racehorse.

"BUD" FISHER TAKES MUTT-JEFF AWAY

MUTT and Jeff "gotta" nerve not to come across with the smooth stuff to-day, but to tell the truth they worked so hard last week putting over the comedy that they deserve a vacation. You can't blame any one for wanting a rest once in a while. However, you just put your last bean on the fact that they will come back to-morrow and you won't go wrong.

GATCOMB LEASES IDLE HOUR TRACK AT MACON

James V. Gatcomb, the New England horseman and owner of the famous Audubon Boy 2:09½, noted as both a racing proposition and sire as a sire, has leased with Roy Miller the Idle Hour Farm, located a few miles from Macon, Ga. There is a fine mile track upon the place. Arrangements have been made for Audubon Boy to be located there for the early part of the coming season, after which he will be brought North for his regular stud season.

Jimmy writes that that Audubon 2:09¼, son of Audubon Boy who last year, as a three-year-old, trotted miles second 2:10 at Reidville, is Wintering well, and that great things are expected of him the coming season in a racehorse.

GREAT TROTTING RACE CLINCHED

The statement of C. K. G. Billings, the owner of the champion trotter Uhlan, 1:58¾, the former pride of New England that he will enter the famous black son of Bingen in a world's trotting event against The Harvester 2:01, and Joan 2:08¾, provided the prize is made a gold cup, apparently clinches the greatest turf event in history.

It now appears that the only possible failure of the world famous trotters to meet may depend upon some question arising as to the amateur or basis. Captain Shaw, the owner of Joan, declares he will not start his champion four-year-old mare unless the proposed race is made one of the best three-in-five heats. How Ed Geers and Mr. Billings will feel as to this stipulation is not as yet known.

The Tricks of the Shoppers

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

MRS. BENNET had persuaded her husband to lease an apartment in the San Dorcia, an apartment house with a pretentious entrance and a brass-buttoned elevator boy.

The rent was $80, which Mr. Bennet thought was more than he could afford. But Mrs. Bennet was ambitious and longed to entertain her bridge club in quite as much style as did the other members.

While she must utilize what furniture they had for the other rooms, the front room she determined should be furnished new throughout in the Louis XVI. period. The landlord's shifting agent allowed her to select her own paper, a pale gray with a faint tracing of silver, which was as near as she could get to what she had once seen in the drawing room of a very handsome house.

The furniture she bought was gilt, upholstered in pale gray damask. She had shopped all over town before she found what she wanted at anywhere near the price she could pay. And then she secured a "bargain," because several of the chairs were slightly faded from being displayed in a shop window.

Haunted Auction Sales

For weeks she went to every auction sale of rugs, until she found one with the colorings she wished—the pale shades of gray and old rose. So far her memory had served her very well, as the paper, furniture and rug were reproductions in cheaper materials of those in the room which she wished to copy.

But when it came to the curtains and draperies she was baffled. She could remember neither the designs nor the material. And she must have something of the right "period." She wanted to be able to say it was "Louis XVI. throughout."

So she went to Blank's, a most exclusive Boylston street decorator, and with the air of a woman of unlimited means asked that a man be sent up to see her drawing room and advise her as to the curtains and draperies.

The man, a high salaried decorator, called the next morning. He told her what would be the most consistent and effective for that room, and promised to send samples of both drapery and curtain materials the next day. The samples came with the estimate for making and hanging complete.

That the amount was far more than she could afford to pay, did not distress Mrs. Bennet in the least. She had never any intention of buying the draperies at so expensive a shop. She merely wished the ideas and advice of a most experienced, high-class man.

Took the Samples Around

So she took the samples around to the various department stores and matched them as cheaply she could. Then, with the aid of her cleaning woman, she made and hung and draped them herself.

As she had carefully absorbed all the ideas and suggestions of the decorator, the result was most satisfactory. And she never fails to say to an admiring caller that she "had Blank's send up a man for the draperies." And that she "would never think of having any one else!"

Blanks' are, of course, out the time of their high-salaried man, their samples, and possibly a little more of their cost dance in human nature. But Mrs. Bennet has draperies which harmonize perfectly with her "Louis XVI." room, and their cost to her was very slight!

The Ordeal

By CHARLES VIVIAN

HE sits upon a carved oak chair
And, after several hurried glances
His eyes assume a glassy stare
With rich suggestions of hypnotic trances

His neck is stiff, his jaws are closed;
Also, a ghastly sort of beer
Leaves nearly half his teeth exposed—
A compromise 'twixt mirth and fear.

"Oh! tell us why," methinks you cry,
He looks so sorry and forsaken?"
The facts are these—poor luckless one,
His photograph is being taken.

Man, since the beginning, has had dreams—but there is one common one—the unwisest of all dreams—the dream of something that never was—that he never will have—that he never had—that would be ill for him perhaps if he had it—you may put the dream in the shape of woman if you will—for woman is the dream man is most concerned with.

Following the ideal of a woman all his days—chasing a shape that can bake pumpkin pies without rubbing the sunburst off her wings—a woman with both a hard, bright eye, to dazzle and a soft bosom to lean his head on in time of storm—"a devil for fascination and an angel for virtue," as some man who must have been chasing one said—a creature both gilded and fantastic, and babyish and tender—following this with his head thrown back and his hands clinched while a thing of pure gold sits by his own fireside.

Heaps of women folk go stumbling after this same mirage and leave absolute content at their fireside. Don't leave man humanity for this shimmer of a flawed dream.

Daysey Mayme's New Thought

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

"YOUNGNESS is a condition, a habit of right thinking," read Daysey Mayme Applates, for her morning motto. "Those who make of life a fine art never grow old."

And this is what started things.

The coffee was poor, and Lysander John grumbled that it was muddy.

"Muddy," said Daysey Mayme, rapturously. "Doesn't that word bring you a mental vision of a country road in Spring, with the tender blossoms pushing their way up to the sunshine along the roadside?"

She closed her eyes to shut the blissful vision in, and remained in that rapt mood until her mother had cleared away the dishes.

When it is Daysey Mayme's turn to peel the potatoes for dinner, she cooks them with the skin on, but this day she went bravely at her task with a knife.

The Secret of Soaring

"If I hold the thought," she said, "that it is a sordid task, I will grow inward; and to grow inward, to grow outward, to rise above, to soar, is the secret of freshness in body and spirit."

She became so engrossed in dwelling on the homely beauty of the steel blade, in picturing where it was made and how many lives had been interested in the making; in brief, in growing outward, that she forgot the hour and the potatoes appeared on the table half raw.

Complaints do not annoy Daysey Mayme when she is cultivating the habit of just being glad; and though she was two hours doing work that usually takes fifteen minutes, she felt herself growing younger, and was glad.

A tint of blue on a plate recalled a Summer sky and brought repose to her soul, while the dishwater grew cold; the soap bubbles suggested the gracefulness of life, activity, suppleness, buoyancy and mobility.

The Beauty of a Soap Bubble

"There was a time," said Daysey Mayme, "when a soap bubble made me think of the brevity of life and hope, and filled me with sorrow. Now that I have set to work being joyous, the soap bubble suggests roundness, completeness, the fullness of life and living."

Everything that Daysey Mayme did that day was poorly done from a material point of view; but the material should not govern one who is trying to think new, live, trustful, hopeful, outcoming thoughts, and Daysey Mayme was sustained by the conviction that she had come into the right relation with the laws that unlock the real vast power within her, which unfolds individuality and make for joy and beauty.

Daysey Mayme will joint a Secret of Youngness club if she can raise the three-dollar initiation fee.

"It is a temporary yielding to the material," she said, "that is unfortunate; for one day has set out for joyous aspiration of the ideal."

The Golden Key to Life's Success

By THOMAS TAPPER

THE Other Man, though I did not know him, began to talk about the scenery from the car window. "It is surprising," he said, "what changes have taken place here. Yesterday I picked up this in a cutting that is being made for a new trolley line."

It was a bit of stone.

"These rough spots, like spirals, were once shell fish. Such specimens are to be found occasionally in great quantities, but this," turning to the other sire, "is, as you see, a perfect shell as large as an oyster, though it is not an oyster. Curiously interesting, isn't it?"

"Does your professional work lead you to study these things?" I asked him.

"No," he said, "I'm not a professional man. I'm in the soap business, but I read a great deal, and everything I see interests me. Take, for instance, the wild oxen along the railway. It has taken me time to learn their names, habits and modes of growth, for I haven't much time to think about them. But I know a hundred or more, and they are like a lot of old friends to me."

"Well," I said, "you must have a special hint for this sort of thing. It probably comes easy to you, and you like to think about it."

"You are about 10 per cent. right and 90 wrong. I do like to learn, that's all there is to it. As for it's coming easy to me, nothing I have ever learned came easy. It is hard for me to get hold of new words and new facts. I can sell soap, and I can sell it easily; that's my business, though in the beginning it was as great a mystery to me as this shell. But I didn't let it remain a mystery. There's a lot to be learned about everything; yes, even about the soap business."

II.

I recalled Sidney Smith's remark that as he never met a man in his life who failed to interest him, and I remarked that the soap man must have built up an interesting philosophy of life. I guessed it to be a simple philosophy, for he appeared a simple and entirely natural man. So I ventured another question:

"Then, if learning about fossils and plants is difficult to you, why burden yourself with the doing of it? Isn't the soap business good?"

"Fair," he said, "the soap business is fine. Soap is all right. People are talking to it more and more. You must remember that every time a piece of soap is used it becomes smaller, which means that the person using it is just that much nearer having to buy another piece. That helps some in our business. But there is a lot more to it than waiting for the piece to be worn thin.

"However, I'm not going to try to sell you soap. I prefer to tell you why I burden myself, as you put it, with fossils and plants—and I'll add trees and shrubs, insects and birds, and anything else that has life, or ever had it.

"I believe the universe is a great mystery. It is to me, at all events. I long ago made up my mind that in a lifetime a man cannot penetrate very far into this mystery. But I also made up my mind that the mystery is here to be penetrated. The mass of things about us, called environment, and the knowledge one can get from everything, appears to me to be like a series of rooms—each one locked, but easily opened if you have the key.

"I used to be discouraged with my progress in business, until I learned that appealing to be busy, by giving my body a grand shake when the boss was looking, did no good. The great secret of all learning and of all success, as far as I can see, is never to be busy in mind. That helped me a lot when I first thought of it, and I determined to get out of the 'leisure moments' business. It is a bad proposition.

"I travel a good deal, and I call my travel hours my college education. If I have business to think over, or write up, I do it. If any time is left, I study the country out of doors, or the book in my bag. And, if anything comes before me that I want to know more about, I make a note of it, and some day I find out about it; for I believe that the unknown thing comes to my attention because it is good for me, it comes to me. Hence it is mine, and I don't run away from it."

"But does not the variety of interests you have interfere with your business?"

"My dear sir, I want to assure you that I have heard that query before. But let me tell you:

"A man tends to business with his mind—do you get that—with his mind!

"Now, whatever interests a man and engages his thought, gives him more mind, and he takes that 'more mind' into his business.

"No objection to that, is there?

"It seems to me that if you want to solve a little problem or two in the universal mystery, you must unlock its unknown quantity with work. I call work the Golden Key. Work is a mind process—not a body shake.

"Take, for instance, that coin on your watch chain. If you learned everything about it, as a lawyer would about a case, you would probably and by making coins and their history a hobby.

"You would be astonished at two things—the amount of knowledge you would go of government, history, finance, and so on, and next, the increase of mental power you would gain.

"Give the mind a little excursion to the right or left of your business, and it lubricates all the machinery.

"Yes, sir, the Golden Key to the mystery is work, and mind work at that. Even physical labor can be guided and arranged and worked out first in the head. A laborer who labors with his body alone, without thought is generally the poorest kind of a man you can hire.

"I know, for we have them in our business."

He Hates to Let a Dollar Go

IT'S not because I like to knock,
But here's the truth concerning Jones:
The fellow's steady as a clock;
He works, and he despises drones.
But talk about your frigid zones!
Just touch him for a five or so
And listen to the way he groans.
He hates to let a dollar go.

A dollar! That's a merry mock.
A nickel, and the miser moans;
He's got most tightness sickened a block;
Waste's not a thing that he condones.
He never pays for telephones,
He never pays to see a show.
It's a thing he clings to like he picks his bones.
He hates to let a dollar go.

His heart is hard as any rock,
For harder than the flinty stones.
He keeps his money in his socks,
And lives on husks and rusks and scones.
He never uses razor bones;
They weary the razor cut, you know.
I'd not be him for all he owns,
He hates to let a dollar go.

L'ENVOY.

I asked him once, in dulcet tones,
A question—when my funds were low;
He said he was not making loans.
He hates to let a dollar go.

THE MYSTERY OF THE "VILLA ROSE"

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written. By A. E. W. Mason. Copyright, 1909, 1910, by A. E. W. Mason

Read this synopsis of all the preceding instalments and begin this great story to-day.

Aix-les-Bains, the noted French resort, toward which the wealthy and the carefree of Europe had flocked for a Summer holiday, awoke one morning to find itself the scene of an unusually puzzling and atrocious crime.

Mme. Camille Dauvray, elderly, rich and noted for her jewels, was discovered strangled the night before, in her salon, at the Villa Rose, by the maid who had to get her Aix. Her maid, Helene Vanquier, who had been her constant attendant, and seemingly devoted to her, was found in an upper room, bound and chloroformed. The murder of Madame Dauvray had been accomplished between 9 o'clock and midnight—that fact being established by Perrichet, the Sergeant-de-Ville, who found the front door wide open as he passed on his rounds.

But Perrichet discovered another thing. The door had not been forced and there were no marks of jimmy or other weapon on any door or window about the mansion. Hence the police of Paris, who had been called into the case, agreed that the murderer had been admitted by an accomplice from within.

Madame had one grand passion—to possess the rarest of jewels, and this she began to satisfy when her husband, a well retired manufacturer of Nancy, died, leaving her a good round fortune. She was, in fact, noted for her collection of gems. Madame Dauvray's household consisted of her maid, Helene; the chauffeur, Servettaz, who slept in his quarters above the garage, and a charwoman, who left every evening at 8 to go to her home in the town.

One other had been added but recently—a beautiful young English woman, Celie Harland—to whose pleasing face Madame had taken a fancy and whom she had brought to Aix-le-Bains as her companion.

On the night of the tragedy, Servettaz was away visiting his parents at Chambery, and the charwoman, as usual, left the villa about 8 o'clock. The only person, as far as known, who remained with Madame were the maid and Celie, the young English girl.

Suspicion, of course, narrowed down to the beautiful strange companion of Madame, and this was accentuated by the fact that she disappeared immediately after the murder and that Madame's fastest motor car was also missing. The sleuth hounds of the French capital at once took up the scent and descriptions of the young woman were flashed to all the frontiers.

Among those who read with interest, and with horror the details of the Dupray affair, the next morning, was Harry Wethermill, a young Englishman, who, though he was only twenty-eight, had already amassed a fortune, and had come to Aix-les-Bains to spend some of it seeking amusement and forgetfulness from busines cares.

Keen for the exhilaration it gave him, he visited nightly the baccarat rooms at the Villa des Fleurs, where he won and lost big sums. There he had been smitten with the beauty of Celia, who accompanied Madame Dauvray, and had sought an introduction. His friend, Julius Ricardo, a retired merchant, had noted the growing friendliness between the young couple, and was therefore not surprised when Wethermill burst into his room that morning and showed him the terrible news in the local paper.

Ricardo remembered having seen the girl the night before the tragedy hysterically in the gardens outside the baccarat rooms, and evidently in great distress. Harry also remembered that when he asked, that evening, to be allowed to meet her the following night, she looked appealingly to Mme. Dauvray and said: "But we have other plans for to-morrow night. Haven't we, Madame?" And it seemed that Madame only too readily acquiesced. And that night, for which they had planned, was the night of the tragedy.

Harry, however, refuses to believe that Celie had a hand in the tragedy, and he rushes to Hanaud, the shrewdest detective in Paris, then on a vacation at Aix. Hanaud, when he hears these facts, admits that "it looks dark" for Celie, but agrees to take up the mystery, warning Wethermill, however, that he "will follow it to the bitter end, no matter where the trail may lead."

Ricardo remembers that once in England he saw this same pretty Celie Harland, then under another name, as the principal in a wonderful spiritualistic seance, that thrilled and mystified a great audience. She seemed then to be in a trance, and performed wonderful things on a dark stage. He resolves, however, to say nothing of this to Wethermill or the detective.

Hanaud decides that the theft of Madame Dauvray's jewels was the motive for the crime; that her gems were "an advertisement to thieves to come and rob her," and that in some way Celie was employed to carry out the project, and murder had been added to the crime of robbery.

He takes Harry and Ricardo to the scene of the crime at the Villa Rose and there Perrichet, the sergeant-de-ville, who discovered the crime, tells his story. Madame was found with a cord knotted tightly about her neck. There were signs of a struggle. She was fully dressed. The maid was found senseless in a room next to the roof.

At Fleuriot, the sharp-featured Judge d'instruction, had already decided that Celie was guilty. He eagerly questioned Wethermill, when he learned Harry had known the girl.

"This Celie was a Jewess, was she not?" he asked.

"No," said Harry.

Fleuriot looked disappointed. He was a fanatic and had been a rabid anti-Dreyfus partisan in the throes of that great affair.

Servettaz, the chauffeur, just then appeared at the Villa.

"SERVETTAZ," said the Commissaire, when Fleuriot had withdrawn, "you will answer any questions which monsieur may put to you."

"Certainly, M. le Commissaire," said the chauffeur. His manner was serious, but he answered readily. There was no sign of fear upon his face.

"How long have you been with Mme. Dauvray?" Hanaud asked.

"Four months, monsieur. I drove her to Aix from Paris."

"And since your parents live at Chambery you wished to seize the opportunity of spending a day with them while you were so near?"

"Yes, monsieur."

"When did you ask for permission?"

"On Saturday, monsieur."

"Did you ask particularly that you should have yesterday, the Tuesday?"

"No, monsieur; I asked only for a day whenever it should be convenient to Madame."

"Quite so," said Hanaud. "Now, when did Mme. Dauvray tell you that you might have Tuesday?"

Servettaz hesitated. His face became troubled. When he spoke, he spoke reluctantly.

"Mlle. Celie Told Me"

"It was not Mme. Dauvray, monsieur, who told me that I might go on Tuesday," he said.

"Not Mme. Dauvray! Who was it, then?" Hanaud asked sharply.

Servettaz glanced from one to another of the grave faces which confronted him.

"It was Mlle. Celie," he said, "who told me."

"Oh!" said Hanaud, slowly. "It was Mlle. Celie. When did she tell you?"

"On Monday morning, monsieur. I was cleaning the car. She came to the garage with six flowers in her hand which she had been cutting in the garden, and she said: 'I was right, Alphonse. Madame has a kind heart. You can go to-morrow by the train which leaves Aix at 1:02 and arrive at Chambery at nine minutes after two.'"

Hanaud started.

"'I was right, Alphonse.' Were those her words? And 'Madame has a kind heart.' Come, come, what is all this?" He lifted a warning finger and said gravely, "Be very careful, Servettaz."

"Her Exact Words"

"Those were his words, monsieur."

"I was right, Alphonse. Madame has a kind heart'?"

"Yes, monsieur."

"Then Mlle. Celie had spoken to you before about this visit of yours to Chambery," said Hanaud, with his eyes fixed steadily upon the chauffeur's face. The distress upon Servettaz's face increased.

Suddenly Hanaud's voice rang sharply. "You hesitate. Begin at the beginning. Speak the truth, Servettaz!"

"Monsieur, I am speaking the truth," said the chauffeur. "It is true I hesitate . . . I have heard this morning what people are saying . . . I do not know what to think. Mlle. Celie was always kind and thoughtful for me. . . . But it is true"—and with a kind of desperation he went on—"yes, it is true that it was Mlle. Celie who first suggested to me that I should ask for a day to go to Chambery."

"When did she suggest it?"

"On the Saturday."

To Mr. Ricardo the words were startling. He glanced with pity toward Wethermill.

Wethermill, however, had made up his mind for good and all. He stood with a dogged look upon his face, his chin thrust forward, his eyes upon the chauffeur.

Besnard, the Commissaire, had made up his mind, too. He merely shrugged his shoulders. Hanaud stepped forward and laid his hand gently on the chauffeur's arm.

"Come, my friend," he said, "let us hear exactly how this happened!"

"That Was All?"

"Mlle. Celie," said Servettaz, with genuine compunction in his voice," came to the garage on Saturday morning and ordered the car for the afternoon. She stayed and talked to me for a little while, as she often did. She said she had been told that my parents lived at Chambery, and since I was so near I ought to ask for a holiday. For it would not be kind if I did not go and see them."

"That was all?"

"Yes, monsieur."

"Very well." And the detective resumed at once his brisk voice and alert manner. He seemed to dismiss Servettaz's confession from his mind.

Ricardo had the impression of a man tying up an important document which for the moment he was done with, and putting it away tickated in some pigeon-hole in his desk. "Let us see the garage!"

They followed the road between the bushes until a turn showed them the gate with its doors open.

"The doors were found unlocked?"

"Just as you see them."

Hanaud nodded. He spoke again to Servettaz. "What did you do with the key on Tuesday?"

"I gave it to Helene Vanquier, monsieur, after I had locked up the garage. And she hung it on a nail in the kitchen."

"I see," said Hanaud. "So any one could easily have found it last night?"

"Yes, monsieur—if one knew where to look for it."

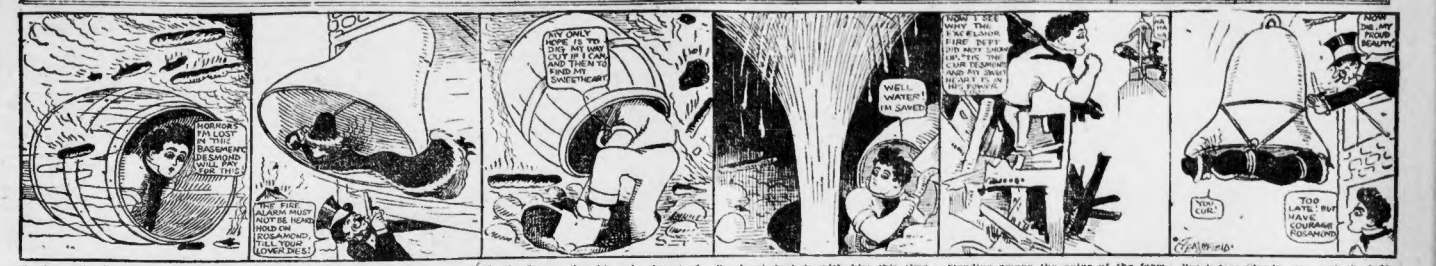
Desperate Desmond

A Continued Picture Drama of Love and Hate, with a Thrill in Its Every Picture



HORRORS! I MUST HIDE IN THE BASEMENT! DESMOND MUST PAY FOR THIS!
THE FIRE ALARM MUST NOT BE HEARD! HOLD ON ROSAMOND, TILL YOUR LOVER DIES!
MY ONLY HOPE IS TO DIG MY WAY OUT! I CAN AND THERE I'LL FIND MY SWEETHEART!
WELL, WATER IN SAWED!
NOW I SEE WHY THE FIRE ALARM FIRE DEPT. DID NOT SOUND! SO, THIS IS YOUR TREACHERY AND MY SWIFT HEARTY FALL IN HIS POWER!
NOW DIE, MY PROUD BEAUTY!
TOO LATE! BUT I HAVE COURAGE ROSAMOND!
YOU CUR!

Claude Ketstire is imprisoned in the cellar of the burning farm house. He has reason to regret that Desmond is the man who set the place on fire, and we don't mind telling you that his suspicions are well founded. That elder hasn't shelter our hero for a little while, but what is he going to do when that entches fire?

You'd hardly size Desmond up as a student of literature, but it is very evident then he has read that sobering ditty, the ballad entitled "Curfew Shall Not Ring To-night." He is forcing Rosamond to hang on to the ringer of the bell, so that no one can give the alarm and call out the Phoenix Fire Company.

Claude figures that his only chance of escape is to dig a hole in the earthern floor of the cellar and work his way out until the fire is over. He's making some pretty rapid digging to bent the decouring flames, and to tell the truth we don't believe he'll make it. However, there's no harm in trying.

Our hero's luck is with him this time. After digging only a few feet he strikes an artesian well, and the water spouts up like the fountain in the Frog Pond on the Common, only more so. So fire can hold out against such a powerful stream of water. It has the Phoenix Fire Company beaten to a frazzle, as T. R. would say.

Standing among the ruins of the farm house, Claude sees Rosamond swinging from the clapper of the bell on the old town hall, while the villain threatens her with drawn revolver. Our hero's brave blood boils with indignation, and he swears that Desperate Desmond shall pay dearly for this day's cruel work.

But before Claude can reach the belfry of the old town hall, the villain has tied our fair heroine to the bell and thrown her and it out of the window. The poor girl will be crushed to death beneath the weight of that huge mass of metal—but its, of course, unless something happens in to-morrow's picture.

The Shadow of Quong Lung

A Thrilling Story of the Highbinders of San Francisco

Mystery of the Orient Transplanted to America :: By Dr. C. W. Doyle

Copyright by C. W. Doyle

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments

LEE MOY, the four-year-old son of Suey Yep, is truck by the wheels of a carriage in a street in San Francisco's Chinatown. The beautiful white woman occupant takes him, accompanied by his mother, to a hospital, where it is found that the child is not only drunk with "sam shu" (Chinese gin, but likewise is stone blind.

Suey Yep tells the doctors that she pities the little fellow with drink, daily, because "when he no drunk, he cry for the sun; but when he drunk, he clap hands, sing and dance and say he see beautiful flowers and sunshine."

Suey Yep belongs to the household of Lee Chung, merchant, who is in debt to Quong Lung, the most dreaded man in the Chinese quarter. The fair Samaritan visits there the next day and prevails on Suey Yep to take her child to an eye specialist. The latter tells the white woman that Lee Moy is hopelessly blind.

Little Lee Moy dies, as the great specialist predicted he would, and Lee Chung, crushed by the weight of Quong Lung's influence, sells out his store, and Suey Yep into the bargain, to Quong. The latter, a Yale graduate and versed in the laws of the White Devils, warns the fair Samaritan not to interfere with the purchase of Suey Yep.

Ho Chung, a goldsmith, desires to write to his wife, Moy Yen, in China, and applies to Chin Lee, a scrivener in Chinatown. He tells Chin Lee that she is surpassingly beautiful and wishes her and the child they expect to sail and meet him in San Francisco. Chin agrees to write the letter and advises his own father in China to see that she reaches the right ship.

CHAPTER VI.
The Entertainment of a Mouse by a Cat.

"THOU hast come, doubtless to discharge thy debt, Chin Lee," said the stout, arrogant man he sat the counter who had destiny in his looks.

"Ay, Quong Lung," replied Chin Lee, with a newly acquired confidence. "I have cast with me that shall not only free me from my indebtedness to thee, but which will put money in thy purse. But my words are privy, and to be spoken only in thy inner chamber."

Quong Lung bolted and locked his front door from within, and further fortified the passage with a fatefully contrived barricade—for the wars of the longs never cease, and there had been a standing reward for his life for many days. But the contending hatchetmen and highbinders agreed that Quong Lung had a charmed life, and that his enemies were shortlived.

And Chin Lee, professional letter-writer and post-master in the art of lying—and following Quong Lung money, and a bitter debt of service! — stretched himself with easy negligence on the smoking mat in Quong Lung's inner apartment, whilst the latter took his place on the other side of the mat.

The Picture of Moy Yen

After they had smoked three or four pipes in silence, Chin Lee drew Moy Yen's miniature from his blouse and handed it to Quong Lung.

"Would she be worth while?" he asked, simply, for rhetoric was out of the question with this man.

"She would, if she were available."

"All things are available to the mighty. But the price I ask is a great one, Quong Lung, and the strong are ever merciful and generous, and it will not strain thy mercy and generosity to pay my dues."

"Name them."

"The remittance in full—to be given in writing—of the money I owe thee: and" —— He paused a moment, and then went on in a trembling voice: "See, Quong Lung, the knowledge then heat of that little thing happening in Hose Alley ten years ago, when a man was found dead with a cer tain writing in his hand, hath set like lead on my head, and frozen—time and again—the flow of words whereby I live."

"Yes?"

The Threat of Quong Lung.

"Return the writing to me, and I will do the bidding at all times."

"Thou shalt do my bidding at all times, in any case," said Quong Lung careless ly. "See to it that the young woman is made available without loss of time."

Death hath no such bitterness as thy supremacy, Quong Lung!"

"Only fools kill themselves, Chin Lee; and 'were pity," he went on, with a sneer, "'twere pity to put an end to the flow of thy 'rhetoric.'"

He turned his head slowly and looked insolently at the trembling Chin Lee, who had ceased smoking and was kneeling supplicantly before him with clasped hands.

As a cat plays with a mouse only to enfreeze the little game of catching it again, he appeared to relent as he said, "Thy debt in money shall be remitted when the young woman is 'available' to use thy phrase. But thy debt in service shall continue with growing interest; I have need of thy friendship. Now, tell me about the young woman."

Advice to Lovelorn

LOOKS DOUBTFUL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A young man, twenty-six years old, and am deeply in love with a young lady. She is twenty-one. She has treated me very mean for the past year, going out with other fellows.

I gave her a beautiful pain for Christmas, thinking this would bring us together again, but without success. How can I regain her love?

B. EB. ing

WHY don't you try and grow interested in some other girl? This girl cannot care for you or she would not treat you as she does. There are many other nice girls. Try and forget this one and form a new friendship.

WRITE TO HIM

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of eighteen and have been keeping company with a gentleman two or three years my senior. Lately we quarreled and broke our friendship. He was at an entertainment when he was taking ill and, after a day or two at home, was sent to the hospital, where his condition is serious.

My friends say it is my place to go and see him, but I think it is not proper for me to do so. Please give me your advice in this matter.

I. W.

DO not go to see him, but write, saying how sorry you are to hear that he is ill and that later, if he would care to see you, you would be glad to go and see him. Ask your mother or some other friend to go with you, or perhaps his mother or sister would take you.

HARD TO TELL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Has a young man the right to ask a young lady on a polite way) if she would like assistance with a heavy suit case which she is carrying? Riding down in a subway train Thursday night I noticed a young lady who carried a suit case which seemed to be of such weight that she dropped it at every little distance. She got off at the same station as I did, and I lifted my hat and said: "Wish any assistance?" She turned to me with a sharp answer and said: "I think I can manage it myself." I would have stepped and rebuked her, but I was in a hurry.

Is it any wonder that present day chivalry is disappearing? And isn't this why men let women stand in cars and trains? READER.

IT is rather a difficult question to decide. Sometimes a girl is peeved by offers of assistance which she does not really need. Of course there is no reason why she should not decline such offers courteously, but a girl is apt to be frightened and to speak sharply at such times. Young girls cannot always discriminate between willingness to be of service and officious mess on a man's part.

Do not judge her too harshly. She probably did not realize that she was speaking brusquely.

Milligan's Silk Hat

By KENNETT HARRIS

MRS. MILLIGAN began it diplomatically. "Your friend, Mr. Perkins, passed by here this morning," she remarked. "He was wearing a silk hat."

"All the fools aren't dead yet," said Milligan.

"Why do you say that, Robert?" demanded his wife. "I don't see anything foolish about wearing a silk hat."

"I know you don't," returned Milligan, calmly. "Whenever you attend to clean the dishes off the walk made a poor job of it."

"He looked just splendid, Pa," urged Dora Milligan.

"That's no excuse for leaving it about half done," said the head of the family, gruffly.

"She means Mr. Perkins, explained Mrs. Milligan. "Robert, why are you so obstinate?"

"I obstinate!" said Milligan. "Well, I like that! I suppose much is stubborn and ingratiating. You'll be saying that it's almost impossible to make any impression on pretty the next thing. I'd like to know why I'm obstinate."

"Then why don't you get a silk hat?" simply because I don't want to, my dear," replied Milligan. "That's about the only thing that prevents me."

"They look so dignified, Pa."

"Do you greatly desire this, my daughter?"

"Would Be So Lovely"

"Oh, I think it would be too lovely for anything!" declared the young woman, enthusiastically. "I'm just crazy for you to wear one!"

"And you really wish me to add that sort of superstructure to my present architectural simplicity, do you, my dear?" inquired Milligan, turning to his wife.

"I've certainly expressed my wish often enough," replied Mrs. Milligan, with a slightly offended air. "You, I want you to, I think a man in your position——"

"How about you, Jim," Milligan asked his son, who was lounging on a chair arm, his hands in his pockets.

"Sure, dad," answered the boy promptly, and with a grin. "If you honestly want to make me happy, you won't put it off another day."

"Oh, you!" ejaculated the sister, sarcastically.

"Well," said Milligan. "All this grieves me the more because I haven't the slightest intention of gratifying you. I'm a Democrat and I have no intention of allowing any dictation as to what I shall or, what I shall drink, or what I shall wear. So that settles it once and for all. What have we got for dinner?"

"You are going to eat roast beef and browned potatoes and drink water with coffee later on—if you eat and drink anything," said Mrs. Milligan.

As Mrs. Milligan served the green apple pie, she observed casually that she had always supposed Mr. Milligan entertained a high opinion of Mr. Perkins.

"Pretty high," said Milligan, "but not more than five inches above the brim. Too much clore in this apple, my dear."

"Just what is your objection to it?" persisted the lady.

"A trifle too much clove, I say," Milligan repeated.

"To a silk hat."

"Oh! Well, I consider that a silk hat is ungraceful, uncomfortable, unsightly and unnecessary. Furthermore, it is unpopular, and there's a good deal of snow on the ground. I never like to put temptation in the way of the young."

Mrs. Milligan Persists

"That's ridiculous. It isn't ungraceful by any means. It has an air of distinction. All well-dressed men wear them."

"Including chicropodists," said Milligan. "But I'm no society butterfly."

"Including the President of the United States," retorted Mrs. Milligan. "He's no society butterfly either."

"He's no butterfly, certainly," admitted Milligan. "Well, my dear, I'll tell you what I'll do. When I'm elected President I'll wear one, just to please you. Now don't say that I'm obstinate."

"As to being uncomfortable, you never wore one, so you don't know anything about it."

"Where ignorance is bliss it's folly to be wise.' Also, the highest medical authorities say that they are conducive to baldness."

"I shouldn't think that——" began Mrs. Milligan, with a half smile.

"Say it. Anyway, there's no need of hastening the inevitable," said Milligan. "A difference between a slight decrease of growth in a confined area and a total crop failure."

"You know, Pa, you wouldn't have to wear it all the time," suggested Lora. "Just on occasions."

"Thank you, darling," said Milligan. "And now we'll change the subject. Did the cost come this morning?"

• • •

"I've known husbands who liked to please their post-master," said Milligan as she removed the detachable part of her coiffure and laid it on the dressing table.

"They're getting scarcer every day," sighed the man, kicking off a shoe with some violence. "I've known wives who would let their husbands have a little peace and avoid distasteful subjects."

"I'll not say another word about it," declared Mrs. Milligan. "I wouldn't mention it at all if I didn't care how you looked or what people thought of you, but I've always taken a pride in your appearance. If you only knew how much it would add to the impression you make, you would look at it differently."

A Primitive Instinct

"I know the impression they always make on me," said Milligan. "I never see one but I instinctively look around for a hair or a brick. It's a primitive instinct, I grant; uncivilized, no doubt, but there you are."

"I think it's our duty to try to overcome such instincts. It's unworthy of a man like you to harbor such prejudices. If it was unbecoming, it would be different, or if you were the only man in the town who was wearing one, but, when every other woman's husband——"

"Excuse me, but didn't you just now tell me that you wouldn't say another word about it?"

"I'm not going to, dear. But you must remember this: We have our children to consider as well as ourselves and Dora naturally feels a little humiliated when——"

Milligan thrust his feet into his slippers, "I believe I left the back door unfastened," he said. "I'll just go down and see to it. Pardon me."

• • •

When Milligan came down to breakfast the next morning, Dora threw her arms around his neck and kissed him with an affection that made him wince. "Daddy," she whispered, "I've been going to pray that just to-day—to please your little girl——"

"I—so—not," said Milligan, emphatically.

"Dear child," he added, in a milder tone. "Why don't you and your mother let me alone? I don't want to be cross with you, but——"

"You would look so splendid," she ceased. "You always do look splendid, Daddy. There isn't a girl I know has such a handsome father as I've got, but you would look splendiferous in a silk hat."

The Entering Wedge

"And a Prince Albert coat, and a winged collar, and a white waistcoat and spats. Oh, I know. This is just the thin end of the wedge. Well, I'm not going to do it. If I hear any more of this, there's going to be blood on the moon. No! No!! NO!!! Do you understand that?"

• • •

There was an unfamiliar ring at the door bell that evening, and Mrs. Milligan opened it to a perfect stranger, who stood for a moment on the threshold and then calmly, coolly walked in, as she retreated in alarm.

"Don't you know me?" asked the stranger.

Mrs. Milligan shrieked. "Dora! Jim!" she cried. "Come here quick and see your father. Oh, Robert, you dear!"

"Hush!" said Milligan. "Don't rouse the neighborhood."

"Don't take it off!" begged Mrs. Milligan. "Here's Dora. Look at him, Dora, isn't he grand?"

Dora launched herself at her father with the spring of a young she panther, and the silk hat, forced loose by the shock, fell from his head to the floor with a hollow thump.

Milligan picked it up gently and examined it anxiously, smoothing the ruffled nap with his coat cuff as one to the manner born.

"You want to be careful, girlie," he admonished seriously, as he replaced it on his head. Then he strode to the mirror in the hallway and smirked at his own reflection.

"It doesn't look so worse after all. What?" he said.

"Only fools kill themselves, Chin Lee; and 'were pity," he went on, with a sneer. "'Twere pity to put an end to the flow of thy 'rhetoric.'"

He turned his head slowly and looked insolently at the trembling Chin Lee, who had ceased smoking and was kneeling supplicantly before him with clasped hands.

As a cat plays with a mouse only to enfreeze the little game of catching it again, he appeared to relent as he said, "Thy debt in money shall be remitted when the young woman is 'available' to use thy phrase. But thy debt in service shall continue with growing interest; I have need of thy friendship. Now, tell me about the young woman."

GOLD DUST IS PAY-DIRT FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Gold Dust is to the housewife what "Pay-dirt" is to the miner. Read the unsolicited testimonial which Stuart Edward White recently gave Gold Dust in his book, "The Mountains," Page 181:

"Even if you do not intend to wash dishes, "bring along some Gold Dust. It is much "simpler in getting at odd corners of ob- "stinate kettles than any soap. All you "have to do is to boil some of it in that "kettle and the utensil is tamed at once."

When a work-dodging man has to wash dishes you may be sure he is going to find "the easiest way." Mr. White evidently found it in the use of Gold Dust. More than a million housewives agree with him; you will if you once try Gold Dust.

Percy the Press Agent

By HANK

"EVER notice how people on the cars talk about themselves?" asked Percy of the Show Girl, as they sat down to the after-theatre supper in the Cafe des Enfants.

"You bet I have," replied the Show Girl. "Why is it?"

"Search me," said Percy, "except that I've noticed that the pronoun 'I' if given a certain inflection resounds penetratingly in a car, especially in the tunnel. I figure that the shape of the tunnels produces a peculiar acoustic——"

"For the love of Mike," exclaimed the Show Girl, "talk South Boston. I can't understand them scientific terms. You was saying something about folks that let everybody know who they are.

"Well, I was coming down on a tunnel train to-day and I got standing next to a dame who had a jaw like the pendulum of a high speed clock. She was with a gink who looked like he'd say, 'Oh, marcy.' if you flipped him on the wrist.

"There was another dame with them who acted as the receiver for the other woman's chatter. Poor fellow, I pitied her.

"Well, the perpetual motion talker springs a line of dope that I couldn't help hearing, and if it wasn't that the motorman is boxed in I'll bet he could have heard her, too. Her talk was all about Hiram, who I found out was the name of the guy sitting next to her. She says, 'Ain't it funny my husband's name was Hiram. His father's name was Hiram, his grandfather's name was Hiram and his great-grandfather's name was Hiram. Hiram seems to have been a family letkhorn.' And then she looks around the car all puffed up like a strutting cham.

"How did Hiram look?' asked Percy.

"Oh, he fixated up and didn't seem to like it much,' said the Show Girl. "I expected to hear him say, 'Cease, oh, please cease,' but he didn't say nothing.'

"It comforts me somewhat to hear you tell that tale,' said Percy, "especially because we actorines have been a reputation for egotism and——'

"Will you please be so kind as to cut out them big words," said the Show Girl spleenfully. "I ain't no Radcliffe highbrow.'

"All right, sweet one," said Percy. "As I was going to say, your experience reminds me of one that I had long ago. I hear two guys chinning next to me, trying all the time to drown out the noise being made by a flat wheel on the car we was on.

"One says as how 'the street' has been hard on him of late, and as how he's strong in steel and weak in Erie stocks. The other pipes up that he's been very successful and that his rubber stock has been stretching up to the high points.

"The conversation sounded like 'legit' to me, except that I couldn't figure out how two Croesuses like that would be wanting to get themselves half smothered to death in a tunnel some hot, when, according to their talk, they ought to be able to afford a couple of 'cabbies' apiece.

"Well, we got to dixie street, and the guy who's been heeing about his rubber stock going up drops a letter. I hollers to him, but he's so busy talking about the high price of champagne this year that he doesn't hear me. So I read the letter. It says: 'Dear Sir—Your application for bookkeeper has been put on file and will be considered when a vacancy occurs.'—

"Cheer!' exclaimed the Show Girl; "I guess he had watered stocks—water-on-the-brain kind.'

"Yes,' said Percy, "and take it from me, the tunnel's no place to talk about yourself.

"You get a crowded house to listen to you,' resumed the Show Girl.

"True, my own,' replied Percy, "but who knows but what there may be a critic among them?"

GETS CARNEGIE MEDAL AS HERO

James M. Flanigan of No. 21 Lake street, Somerville, a modest Catholic medal hero, has been working nine months as a brakeman for the Boston Elevated Railway unknown to his companions as a man who has risked his life for others. The secret leaked out today when one of Flanigan's fellow brakemen saw him reading a letter from Carnegie Hero Fund Commission, announcing that the medal is on the way. The report ripped all over the Elevated system till it reached the ears of the high officials of the company. Tom Flanigan was called to the executive offices on Milk street and congratulated.

Hero in Colliery.

Flanigan, who is twenty-one years old, lives with his mother and sister. The three came here a year ago from Pittston, Pa., where the young man worked in the colliery of the Pennsylvania Coal Company. On May 7, 1909, his colliery was the scene of a terrific explosion. In watch Flanigan, at the risk of his own life, rescued two fellow-workmen. He went down into the mine alone, after others had refused to accompany him. Both men were unconscious when he reached them, and one of the two was on fire. Flanigan beat out the fire and carried each to the surface in his arms. They he fell exhausted from the "afterdamp" of the explosion. He was critically ill for several days.

Besides the medal, Flanigan is awarded $1,000. The terms of the money he does not understand as yet, but he has written to the chairman of the commission for information. His impression is that the money will be used in case he is disabled or wants to better his condition.

Following is his story of the rescues:

Went to Friends' Aid.

"I have nothing to say except that when the wind knocked me down I knew that an explosion had taken place. I also knew that my friends were in it, and I hurried to them and got them out as best I could. I simply did what any other fellow would have done for his friends—that's all."

LYNN MAN OBJECTS TO FOUR-TRACK PLAN

A. T. Sampson, chairman of the railroad committee of the Lynn Board of Trade, objects to the present plans of the Boston & Maine and New York, New Haven & Hartford regarding installing of a four-track way from Lynn to Beverly. Mr. Sampson objects on the ground that it will injure the business district. He also declares that if the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn road, the "Narrow Gauge," is absorbed by the Boston & Maine and is electrified, with tunnel approach under Boston harbor, it will mean a twenty-five cent fare from Lynn to Boston in place of the present twenty cents. Mr. Sampson advises the City Council for appointment of an expert engineer to investigate the four-track and merger plans. There will be a hearing on his petition next week.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Bankers discouraged the idea that the Standard Oil decision is something cast in preparation for a critical time in the financial world when the Standard Oil decision is rendered by the Supreme Court.

$ $ $

When the decision in the Northern Securities suit was rendered the first impression was that it would smash prices all to bits; the truth was that they rose on the strength of it. The market was all prepared for it. Bad news does not always hurt the market, but good news often will send it down. This is not inconsistency but a deep knowledge of human nature. When all that can be favorable is known then is the time to stand from under.

The fight for reciprocity with Canada is being carried on valiantly by President Taft and by Premier Laurier. Although wheat prices have broken somewhat under this influence, there can be no permanent decline in wheat as a result of it. The price of wheat is fixed by the world's markets, and farmers need not be alarmed by the temporary one made of the situation by speculators.

As the time approaches for decision by the United States Supreme Court on the Tobacco and Oil Trusts, the public mind is found less hostile to the idea of trusts. The Coffee Trust is operating with impunity, simply because it happens to have its headquarters outside the United States. The Arkwright Club, which is the Spinners Trust, has curtailed the output of the cotton mills. The copper men are simply marking time, precedent in struggles to reduce the output of that metal. Since the Coffee Trust, the most flagrant of them, goes unpunished, it must be assumed that the Government at Washington will no longer attempt to penalize combinations in restraint of trade.

Although many new high records for the movement were made in the stock market last week, the really important development was the undisputed proof presented that a real revival of trade is at hand. The United States Steel Corporation furnishes the most surprising evidence of this in its course of unfilled orders, but investigation at the headquarters of other trusts and corporations finds a similar movement under way. Even the railroads are surprised by the net profits of their recent operations.

These profits have been due partly to the good weather and very largely to the unusual economies forced by the needs. Inability to raise freight rates. The business world in general, noting the honest efforts of the railroads to do business under adverse circumstances, seems willing to let them have an advance of rates.

The course of Atchison is being closely watched in the belief that the present campaign in it will not rest until much higher prices are scored. The position of the stock at this time is regarded as a more than ordinarily good one, and as a 5 per cent. dividend payer it is thought it ought to bring more in the stock market. If freight rates are raised Atchison may boom.

$ $ $

It will not be surprising if the Reading shares, with their concentrated ownership, assume a strong leadership in the market activity that may be forthcoming in the present year, especially the first half of it. The company has expended its money most wisely and in its best physical condition now it ever has been. If so minded the pool could send the stock to 200.

$ $ $

There was a good deal of realizing during the week by one of the pools in this security, and the consequent was a drop in the quotations, the market not being able to take all of the offerings. It is thought, however, that when the liquidation is ended the purely speculative interest in the issue will make a further rise. The average trader is inclined to be bullish on the stock.

THINKS POVERTY WILL COME TO END AS SLAVERY DID

We have grown to look on poverty as a permanent condition, but there was a time when slavery was regarded as a necessary condition. Even Plato in his vision of an ideal commonwealth included slavery. I believe some day that future generations will look back on the poverty of our day in the same astonishment we feel in contemplating slavery. The philosophy of history points in this direction.—Dr. J. H. Hollander, Johns Hopkins University.

FLOUR DROPS 35 CENTS A BARREL

The first effects of the anticipated reciprocity treaty with Canada are already felt in Boston. Flour is 35 cents a barrel cheaper than it was a week ago. It has been going down, down, down, and will probably decline further, according to local mill men and wholesalers.

A dispatch from Pittsburg says that flour there was today cut 25 cents a barrel. This is taken to mean that the reciprocity treaty will pass Congress, the dispatch says. Dealers who have been very nervous during the situation declare that there is a great deal of wheat in Canada that will be dumped into Northwestern American markets as soon as the treaty is signed. yet.

LIVING MODEL BLOCKS WALK

The police of Station 4 today clapped the lid on parading by living models along Washington street. The order came from headquarters because of the big crowd that gathered in front of the J. G. Small Company store at No. 352 Washington street. It was almost impossible for pedestrians to get by on the sidewalk.

The company had a model in one of its show windows. The young lady tried on a number of handsome gowns, while scores looked on from outside. As a result of the action of the police the model was forced to demonstrate her gowns inside the store.

Two of the gowns shown were winners of gold medals in the recent national style show. They were designed by Miss Hilma Nelson of Boston. One was a beautiful spring opera gown, with embroidery made in 1750 and so valuable it is kept safe in a glass case. Another gown was trimmed with old thread lace. The Small Company showed a gown it has designed for use by Julian Eltinge, the impersonator, during his London engagement.

CAPT. HAMMOND OF TUG LIKENS RESIGNS

Captain Francis E. Hammond of the tug Lykens has resigned and will go to his home in Chatham, Cape Cod, because of personal reasons. His wife died in Illinois. He was in command of the Lykens on the night of January 10, when off Peshet Hill bar the barges Trevorton, Corbin and Pine Forest broke adrift from the craft and stranded in the breakers. Eighteen lives were lost through the barges breaking from their tow. After the disaster an investigation was made by the United States Local Inspectors of Steamboats. Nx report has been rendered as yet.

RACES MAY 30 TO OPEN SEASON

The Indianapolis motor speedway 500-mile international sweepstakes race next Memorial Day is to be the opening event in the automobile racing circuit which the American Automobile Association is forming, and it is looked upon with favor by the management of the big brick speedway. Tentative plans for the circuit were made by various members of the contest and rules committees of the American Automobile Association during the Chicago automobile show and committees have been appointed to put the project into tangible form.

The racing circuit idea has been considered by the manufacturers for some time and the action taken at the show on many of the contest and rules bodies was the result of agitation which has resulted over a period of about a year's duration, and on account of the fact that the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis speedway may be the greatest race ever planned and is richer in prize money than any other event in the history of the sport, the American Automobile Association officials believe that it will be a fitting opening for the season of 1911, which they think is to be the greatest since motor racing was instituted.

Seven entries have been made thus far for the International Sweepstakes race, the last being a Westcott specially built car, which will be driven by Joseph Knight. The Westcott is a comparatively new car in racing circles, none of the previous performances have been very consistent and the manufacturers have built a large motor built along the same lines as the engine which will prove a surprise in speed circles. The other entries are Lewis Strang, in a Buick; David Bruce-Brown, in an Inter-State "50;" Johnny Aitken, in a National "40;" Louis Disbrow, in a Pope-Hartford, and Frank Fox, in a Pope-Hartford, a car which, for which a driver has not been nominated. Ralph Mulford was the first named entrant.

On the 19th of the month Barney Oldfield, the noted speed driver of the Ford Motor Company, Detroit, Michigan, will go to Orleans, where he will participate in the Mardi Gras festivities, being on the card February 25. Two of the Ford model T racing cars that have been made such a name for themselves in the many big track races of the country have been shipped to New Orleans. Kulick will drive one of these racers in the five and ten-mile dashes against such men as Strang, De Palma and his Simplex and many other well known drivers in such cars as the Locker and National.

The Walker-White Controversy Shows Up Mr. White's Petty Politics

We are witnessing a very interesting contest in the Legislature between Speaker Walker and Norman H. White of Brookline.

The question at issue is whether the Governor shall have POWER to make a thorough investigation of the methods of conducting the State business in its different departments, in order that he may assume intelligently the new duty placed upon him to criticise the appropriations.

This contest is interesting because it is the first skirmishing between two men who want to lead the Republican party next year against Foss, the Democratic Governor.

Both Mr. Walker and Mr. White deny that their participation in this contest touches their ambition to become the Republican candidate for Governor.

The circumstances strongly indicate that Mr. Walker speaks the truth when he makes this disavowal.

His part in the controversy began last year when the law was enacted which bears his name and gives to the Governor the DUTY AND RESPONSIBILITY of overhauling the expense accounts and revising the appropriations.

When this bill was passed a Republican Governor was at the helm, and it received his approval. It was so obvious that a Governor on assuming these new and important and difficult duties should have the assistance of whatever investigation into the business methods which he deemed PROPER, and yet the power seemed so doubtful under the language of the Walker law, that Governor Foss requested the Attorney-General to advise him whether or not he could conduct such an investigation without an amendment of the Walker law.

When the Attorney-General told the Governor that the law was NOT BROAD ENOUGH to give him such a power, Speaker Walker in a public interview declared that the bill intended to give the Governor such a power and that he ought to have it.

Thereupon the Governor sent a special message to the Legislature asking that he be given the necessary authority.

Mr. Walker could not, if he desired, do less than his utmost to meet the Governor's request.

On the other hand, Norman H. White of Brookline, who has now passed from a very creditable insurgency on the great railroad merger question to be a leader among the regulars, has thrown down the gauntlet.

Neither consistency, nor statesmanship, nor fair play, nor good judgment moves Mr. White in this contest. His action is all POLITICS and ambition. He can circumlocute and sophisticate until the public grows weary, the fact remains flagrant that Mr. White, having become a leader in MACHINE POLITICS, is now rushing to the rescue of one of the chief resources of Republican machine power in the State.

It has been a long time since any State institution has received a REAL investigation.

In many quarters there is great consternation at the danger from an inquiry such as an able business man and a fearless and an aggressive executive like Governor Foss might institute.

In these alarmed quarters has rested for many years much of the power by which the Republican machine has carried caucuses and State conventions. The MACHINE leaders fear the results of this proposed inquiry by Governor Foss.

Vainly Mr. White tries to deny that this fear is his motive of action. He builds around it a mass of absurd verbiage, but the truth bulges out very plainly.

Mr. White is worse than mistaken when he says that the responsibility for the character of the State appropriations CANNOT be placed upon the Governor because the Governor can only recommend and veto.

He can certainly be responsible for what he recommends and vetoes. And this is the length and the breadth of a Governor's power anyway.

Speaker Walker's position in this contest with Mr. White is consistent and characteristic.

Independence of party machine interests has brought Mr. Walker into popular favor in the last two years, and has made him the natural Republican leader of the State.

His INDEPENDENCE has annoyed the Republican politicians and has made some other men, whose leadership depends more upon machine politics than upon their popularity with the Republican voters of the State, very jealous of his growing influence.

Mr. Walker has nothing to lose by this contest. He is so obviously RIGHT that those persons who from interest may oppose him will secretly respect him.

But for Mr. White the prospect is different. He has chosen a most unfavorable ground on which to contest with Mr. Walker.

Mr. White will do well to remember that the man is always strongest who knows his own weakness.

Mr. White is impulsive. In the hands of adroit and calculating politicians he is considerable of a child. During his career in the Legislature he has rendered the State splendid service. Judged by its importance, his brave and steady opposition to the shameful raids upon our laws and our commercial interests by the New Haven Railroad ought to give him a public credit on which his error-breeding impulsiveness can make heavy drafts before exhausting it.

Mr. White has made several mistakes in the last two years. This controversy is another blunder. We hope Mr. White will change his tactics. He is too good a man to be lost to the public service by his own rashness.

Are You Contented?

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

I ASKED the rock beside the road what joy existence lent,
It answered, "For a million years my heart has been content."

I asked the truffle-seeking swine, as rooting by he went,
"What is the keynote of your life?" He grunted out, "Content."

I asked a slave, who toiled and sang, just what his singing meant.
He plodded on his changeless way, and said, "I am content."

I asked a plutocrat of greed, on what his thoughts were bent.
He chinked the silver in his purse, and said, "I am content."

I asked the mighty forest tree from where its force was sent.
Its thousand branches spoke as one, and said, "From discontent.

I asked the message speeding on, by what great law was rent
God's secret from the waves of space. It said, "From discontent."

I asked the marble, where the works of God and man were blent.
What brought the statue from the block. It answered, "Discontent."

I asked an angel, looking down on earth with gaze intent,
How man should rise to larger growth. Quoth he, "Through discontent."

MUCH is said and written about a contented mind.

Many sermons are preached against discontent.

But if men had always been content with their lives, earth would be a dull and crude place to-day.

There is something godlike in a certain order of discontent.

In fact, if the great Creative Power had been content with just itself, and chaos, the inconceivably glorious solar systems would never have sprung into existence. If men had been contented to be cave dwellers or mound builders, there would be no such thing as art or architecture in the world to-day.

If Columbus had been contented in his native village, America might not have been discovered.

If Benjamin Franklin had been satisfied to be the ignorant son of a poor tallow chandler, the world would have missed much, and France would probably be under the dominion of England and Joan of Arc possessed a really contented mind.

Analyze Your Discontent

Whoever you are, or whatever you are, if you feel discontent, analyze its cause and its purpose.

There is a good, healthful discontent, and there is a bad, unwholesome discontent.

Unless you have a grateful heart, a heart which lifts itself in earnest thanks to God for SOMETHING, then your discontent is probably purely selfish. There can be no life which does not contain something to be grateful for, and the habit of gratitude is one of the most powerful assets of success and happiness which can be named.

If you wake in the morning and say, I thank God for this new day of life and for whatever blessings are mine," then you can safely say to yourself and to your Creator, afterward, that you are not satisfied with your environment or with your situation, and ask for strength and guidance to change it and better it.

It is just as a student might say, "I am thankful for my good parents, my home, my school books, but I will not be satisfied or contented until I have an education."

Then the student sets to work to obtain that education. But the boy who says, "I hate home and I hate school, and I wish I had a million dollars and didn't need to study or do any work," that boy is cultivating the noxious kind of discontent which will only bring harm to him.

Those Who Are Never Grateful.

People who are never grateful for anything will never have anything to be grateful for.

A lively educated woman, through continual ingratitude and fault-finding with life, came into a position of extreme poverty and dependence. She went out at day's work and did all sorts of odd jobs to eke out a livelihood.

Finally she went to a friend and said if she had a small house to live in she could work her way back to success. She could rent rooms and take in sewing. The house was obtained, and she was settled in it, at no expense to herself.

But she began immediately to find fault with everything connected with her residence and with her roomers. She did not attract success, and she discouraged the friend who had tried to assist her.

Just so we discourage God when we fail to show appreciation for anything in our lives. Had the woman been grateful the friend would have assisted her to rise up and out to higher things.

Aid Will Come to Us

If we are grateful, aid and encouragement will come to us to improve our situations.

We are not asked to be contented with anything but the best, but we are expected to be grateful, even while we are discontented, for whatever blessings we do possess.

Are you grateful for yours?

He Writes About A Home Lockout

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

I WAS reeding a funny story the other day, sed Pa to Ma wen he calm hoam from the club. It seems that a deer young wife which lives caver in Somerville had locked her husband out at four in the morning, vary much eggenst her husband's wishes. What, sed Ma, do you reely mess to say that it was eggenst her husband's wishes. Wasent he the unreesonabul thing, sed Pa, to make any objeckshun.

Anyhow she locked her husband out, & the poor man cuddent git in, so he went right back down town, & the funny part of it was that he had a lot good luck to meet her tuff brother Roy, wich had jest calm back from the Pacifick oshun, on a whale boat. The two of them went caver to one of the best yung inns on the water front, sed Pa, & after the honest brother had had a few grass at the grog, Pa sed, he made the husband of the heroine go hoam with him, & then, sed Pa, the following dialogue en-sued:

The wife sed: Who is that at the door? The husband sed Only me & yure brother.

The wife said: If it is my sailor brother he must mak a noise like a sailor. I wont do it, sed the brother, I think my own sister ought to know her brother's voice, I wont mak a noise like a sailor for surpooj.

But we must git in, sed the husband, we certingly must git in. Can't you mak sum kind of a sailor noise? Can't you say sumthing, like Yo Ho my Lads, Yo Ho. If you cant say that, sed the husband, say sumthing about Fifteen men on a dead man's chest. Whatever you do, kind sailor, sed the husband, shoot sumthing fine across the transom, bekaus I fain wud sleep, & we must git into the flat.

& jest then, sed Pa, the door opened & the wife looked into the face of her sailor brother, & sed Oh, Elihu deer, I am so glad to see you back, how is everything on the Pacifick oshun? You can cum in, deer brother, but my husband will have to go back down town. His Ho, sed Pa, that was certingly handling the husband sumthing, was it not? The poor old sucker went back down town & died that nite in a terribul blizzard. It served him rite, at that. He shud never have went away from the house as long as he had a few nickels with wich to rap on the door with. I wud like to see my wife keep me out of my house, wuddent you, Bobbie?

I dount know, Pa, I sed, I havent got anything to say. I only know that Ma is mor intakus to see you in the house than out of it.

Did you say the husband died in a blizzard? sed Ma.

That is what he did, sed Pa, tiny found him under the fleecy mantle, buitful eeven in deth.

Oh, sed Ma, now I understand why so many married wimmen like Dakota.

Inklings and Thinklings

By WEX JONES

Philadelphia sansiety is excited because Anthony J. Biddle has biddled all the dancing men into attending his new boxing club. It is far more soothing to sit quietly in a chair and languidly observe two young men mixing things up than to jump into a melee oneself, even when assisted by music and an active danceress. Too much of a beastly bore, don't you know. The best thing the deserted fair sex can do is to turn the dance into a basketball game, which is quite as exciting as boxing and about ten times as strenuous.

What a tough life for spirits should the Chicago seeress's prediction come true of a telephone to the other world.

SPOOK OPERATOR—Hey, Napoleon, wake up! Here's a call for you.

NAPOLEON—Hello, hello! Who is this? Oh, the London police department. You've got a pickpocket surrounded in an ashcan and you don't know how to proceed? Make a feint on his left and then throw in the Scots Guards on his right. Good-by, I want to sleep.

OPERATOR—Robert Browning. Robert Browning! Boy, go and bring that poet over here to answer a call.

BROWNING—Hey, what is it? You're the poet of the Nashville Banner, and you want a rhyme for "undulate"? Try, er, try—try—or, hang it, there is no rhyme for "undulate." Look up some of my old stuff and change your lines.

OPERATOR—Is Shakespeare in the house? Shakespeare! Sha-k-es-pe-are!

SHAKESPEARE — Marcy come up! What wight is this? Oh, a dramatist. You would have an idea? If I had one I would use it myself. Go and swipe one—that's what I was went to do.

Wo Tingfang has resolved to cut off his queue, which is most unimportant.
